Inflation Bill 'Feeble' Cure, Says Truman In Signing It

Charges Rejection Of Own Program May Bring About Economic Collapse

By the United Press

President Truman signed the Republican anti-inflation bill on a better-than-nothing basis yesterday, but blasted Congress in strong terms for making such a "feeble response" to his demands for broader powers.

He said the credit control measure which was all of his eight-point anti-inflation program the recent special session of Congress would enact was "but a tiny fraction of what we need."

He went on to charge that the GOP-controlled Eightieth Congress had "failed to meet its responsibility to the American people . . . in this critical situation" and warned that the rejection of his own program may lead to a disastrous boom-and-bust.

1500-Word Denunciation

The leaders of Congress were interested only in arguing about who is to blame for high prices, and not in doing anything effective to remedy the situation, he declared.

Mr. Truman set forth his position in a bitterly phrased 1500-word statement which accompanied his signing of the bill.

"The Congress said 'no' to my program," he said. "They had no program of their own. They made excuses and called names and argued about who was to blame for inflation but they did nothing effective to control it."

He said that was "final proof" that the GOP leadership of Congress cared only about serving "the ends of special privilege, rather than the welfare of the whole Nation."

The bill is designed to put the brakes on "easy credit" which economists call a major inflationary pressure.

Puts Brake on Buying

It authorizes the Federal Reserve Board to (1) reimpose wartime restrictions on installment buying and other forms of consumer credit, and (2) raises the reserve requirements of Federal Reserve member banks to dry up part of their lending capacity.

Main effect of the law, to the average American, probably will be that automobiles, radios and other goods bought "on time" will have to be paid for one-third down and the balance in from only 12 to 18 months.

The man-in-the-street also may find it harder to borrow money from his bank, and interest rates may be higher.

The Federal Reserve Board announced the new restrictions will not go into effect for at least 35 days. The law requires that 30 days notice be given in the Federal Register, and a board spokesman said it would take about five days to publish the regulations in the register.

Charges Inconsistency

Mr. Truman commented acidly that some congressional leaders had opposed his request for a $19.50 a month increase in the $39-a-month Social Security payments to aged couples, on the grounds it would be "inflationary."

But he said the same Congressmen were quite willing to pass an income-tax cut which added $16,725 a year to the spending power

Orange-Drink Machine Satisfies U. N. Thirst

Lake Success, Aug. 16 (AP).—It's apparent here that the world situation is not bad enough to drive United Nations delegates to drink—hard, that is.

Soft-drink business is getting so good in the delegates' lounge that the management today installed a huge, bright pink machine that slices, squeezes and strains oranges all in one rumbling operation.

"Looks like an atom smasher," said one delegate, obviously awed by American mechanical genius.

Babe Ruth, Home Run King, Is Dead

Idol of Baseball Passes in Sleep After Long Fight With Cancer

Pictures and other articles about Ruth, Pages 18 and 19

New York, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—Babe Ruth, baseball's beloved home-run king, died in his sleep at 8:01 o'clock tonight, ending a career devoted to baseball for more than a quarter of a century.

The famed Sultan of Swat, for 22 years a major leaguer, the man who hit 714 home runs in his lusty lifetime and who set a record 60 in the 1927 season alone, passed quietly and peacefully after a two-year fight against cancer of the throat.

He was 53 years old.

The Babe fought to the end, and in his last weeks only his stout heart kept him alive. His booming voice was all but gone, and his strength was sapped.

It was just a matter of time. And when death came, below his window in the grimy Manhattan street was a crowd of more than 150 kids—the kids to whom Ruth had devoted the last part of his life.

Family at Bedside

Ruth's family and close friends were by his side when he died. They had been on the alert for nearly a week, ever since Ruth was placed on the critical list last Wednesday after pulmonary congestion set in.

He had an encouraging weekend, so much of a rally that he was able to leave his bed in Memorial Hospital for 20 minutes Sunday. But, then at 2 p. m. today, the pulmonary condition reappeared. At 5 p. m. his condition was "most critical." At 6:25 p. m. he was "sinking rapidly," and at 8:01 p. m. he died, after receiving the last rites of the Catholic Church.

Ruth's body was taken tonight to the Universal Funeral Chapel, where it may be viewed by the public some time after 3 p. m. Tuesday. A special mass will be said at St. Patrick's Cathedral at 11 a. m. Thursday.

Funeral plans, the place of interment and the time will be announced Tuesday. The funeral probably will be held Thursday afternoon or Friday morning.

Ruth's was a great career, from the time he broke into baseball with the Baltimore Orioles after a term in St. Mary's, a semi-correctional institute in his native Baltimore. That was in 1914.

By 1915 he was in the major leagues, first as a pitcher with the Boston Red Sox. He stayed with the Sox for five years, and then joined the New York Yankees, where he reached his pinnacle of fame.

Earned $80,000 in 1931

He hit his famous 60 home runs in 1927, and in 1931 he earned the fabulous salary of $80,000, $5000 more than the President of the United States.

Then it was down the ladder for the Babe. In 1934, he left the Yanks and spent the next season, a hapless one, with the Boston Braves. In 1938 he served Brooklyn as a coach. But the Babe was through—as a player, but not as a baseball man.

He joined the Ford Motor Co. in 1947 as director of its junior baseball program, and from then on his life was kids. He kept up his activities even after he was stricken.

A half hour before Ruth died Father Thomas Kaufman of St. Catherine's of Sienna Church, who had been making regular visits to Ruth's ninth-floor hospital room, arrived and administered the last rites of the Catholic Church.

Ruth's wife, Mrs. Claire Ruth, was at his bedside with two adopted daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Sullivan and Mrs. Richard Flan-

West Envoys And Molotov Meet Again

None of Diplomats Will Comment After Parley Lasting 2 Hrs., 40 Mins.

Moscow, Aug. 16 (AP).—Envoys of the United States, Britain and France met with Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov again tonight in the current negotiations to settle East-West differences in Berlin and Germany.

The meeting in the walled Kremlin was the longest since the negotiations began July 31, lasting 3 hours and 40 minutes. None of the western diplomats would comment as they left the Kremlin. They refused even to state whether they thought there would be another meeting.

United States Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith and French Ambassador Yves Chataigneau went immediately to the British Embassy with Britain's special envoy, Frank Roberts, for a conference.

Smith seemed in good spirits as he sent his chauffeur to get something to eat. But the envoys themselves went right into the meeting without stopping for food.

(A responsible diplomatic informant in London said Molotov was to give Russia's reply to the Western proposals for a Berlin settlement at today's meeting. He said the Western proposals had been "rehashed but not modified" and added today's talk might be the climax of the 18-day East-West discussions.)

Tonight's conference was the sixth with Molotov. The Western envoys met with the Soviet Foreign Minister July 31. He was present also at the August 2 meeting with Prime Minister Stalin, which was followed by meetings with Molotov on August 6, August 9 and August 12.

The three Western diplomats met among themselves at the British Embassy before they left for the Kremlin at 5:45 p. m. Moscow time, (10:45 a. m. EST). They returned to the British embassy at 9:43 p. m.

There has been no indication in Moscow as to how the talks are going. The Western diplomats have been silent on the progress of the conferences.

Prefers 'A Friend'

Saudi Arabia Scorns Loan From U. S.

By The Associated Press

The government of Saudi Arabia has refused to accept a 15-million-dollar American loan because of its displeasure with alleged United States support of the Jewish cause in Palestine.

"We feel we would like to get assistance from a friend and not from someone helping our enemy," a spokesman for the Saudi Arabian Legation told a reporter.

Saudi Arabia deliberately permitted a 15-million-dollar credit earmarked for it at the Export-Import Bank to expire July 15, he said, "because of the attitude of the American Government in the Palestine situation."

The Export-Import Bank said the loan has been available to the Saudi Arabian government since January 10 of 1946.

The 15 million dollars is part of a total 25 million dollars authorized for reconstruction and modernization in Saudi Arabia. About 10 million dollars was used by the Saudi Arabians shortly after the money became available.

The Saudi Arabian spokesman said his country now has "no intention" of asking the bank to reinstate the credit.

"We will use our own money for the projects we have in mind," he said.

Lie-Detector Test Offered Chambers, Alger Hiss

Time Editor Agrees; Other Promises Probers Formal Answer Wednesday

A dramatic lie-detector test to be administered by a prominent Chicago criminologist was proposed yesterday by the House Committee on Un-American Activities to determine whether Alger Hiss, former top State Department official, or his accuser, Whittaker Chambers, is telling the truth about Communist involvement.

The proposal, it was learned, was made by the committee to Hiss during a three-hour executive session yesterday from which the committee emerged still unable to tell whether the charges of Communist activity against Hiss are reliable.

"From the testimony of the two witnesses," Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) announced after yesterday's closed session, "it is impossible at this point to tell which one is telling the truth. The committee is taking every step to determine the true facts. The committee will have the investigative staff check on every possible corroborative detail, this to be implemented by daily executive sessions of two subcommittees meeting in Washington and other places."

Pair to Meet August 25

"Testimony up to this point has been turned over and will be turned over to the United States attorney, who is receiving the committee's complete cooperation."

George Morris Fay, United States attorney for the District of Columbia, obtained the committee's record last week in a move of his own to determine whether perjury had been committed before the committee and to prosecute if prosecution is warranted.

Chairman Thomas announced also that the committee will bring Hiss and Chambers together to face each other at 10:30 a. m., August 25, and will resume its espionage hearings on September 7. The two had been scheduled to face each other before the committee yesterday.

Chambers, self-styled former Communist and now a senior editor of Time magazine, who accused Hiss in public testimony before the committee, already has agreed to undergo the lie detector test.

Hiss Answer Awaited

Hiss, who has denied under oath—a denial which he reiterated today in detail—that he ever knew Chambers or ever was a Communist, was asked by the Committee for an answer by Wednesday morning as to whether he, too, would submit to the lie-detector.

Hiss' immediate reaction to the proposal was that he considers the lie-detector an unreliable instrument which measures emotions rather than veracity, it was said. However, he agreed to give the committee a formal answer by Wednesday morning. Indications last night were that under certain conditions he would agree to the test, which would be unique in the history of congressional investigations.

The spectacle of the former ranking State Department official, now president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, and a senior editor of one of the Nation's popular news magazines submitting to a scientific lie test would be without precedent. It also undoubtedly would be behind closed doors and would not be a spectacle which the public would be permitted to witness.

Keeler Already Consulted

Chairman Thomas already has consulted Leonarde Keeler, developer of a polygraph, popularly referred to as a lie-detector, which records blood pressure, respiration and other physical reactions which may arise in deception tests. Keeler, considered the leading authority in the Nation on this still controversial method of testing a person's truthfulness, has agreed to administer the test in Washington.

Meanwhile, the committee arranged with Hiss yesterday to have a subcommittee question his wife in New York on aspects of the Chambers story in which she figured.

Chambers, as one of the committee's two star witnesses at the current hearings on Communist activities and espionage, has reiterated, since Hiss' public denial his original allegation that Hiss was a member of an "elite" underground Communist group in Washington in the middle 1930s.

Chambers is also standing on his

4 New Polio Cases Reported In D. C. Area

Health Department Reveals Total of 66 So Far This Year

Four new cases of polio in the Washington metropolitan area were reported by the District Health Department yesterday.

They raised to 66 the Health Department's total of polio cases in Washington and nearby communities this year. Of the total, 31 were District residents and 35 from outside the District. The figures for the same time in 1947 were five District residents and eight nonresidents. The new polio listings were:

A 3-year-old girl from Fairfax, Va., admitted to Children's Hospital Thursday; a 20-year-old man from Alexandria, Va., admitted to Gallinger yesterday; a 7-year-old boy from Arlington, Va., admitted to Children's Friday, and a 5-year-old Hyattsville, Md., girl admitted to Children's Thursday.

Virginia's Health Department yesterday reported 16 new cases of polio, including three cases reported Saturday. The State Health Department's roster shows a total of 183 cases to date, with Norfolk County's 15 cases and Arlington County's 10, indicating the most troubled areas.

North Carolina's epidemic yesterday was reported by the State Health Board to have reached a total of 1497 victims, including reports of 33 new cases. There have been 78 deaths attributed to infantile paralysis, the State Board reported. Meanwhile, South Carolina's Health Board said the outbreak in that State appeared to be slackening.

D. C. Cashier, $500 Short, Disappears

A cashier in the District tax collector's office disappeared from work yesterday leaving a shortage of at least $500.

Commissioner Guy Mason announced discovery of the shortage after a conference in his District Building office attended by other top city officials late yesterday.

Mason said the shortage is still under investigation. This probe may be completed today. Officials said the shortage may prove greater than $500.

First lead on the missing money came last Wednesday when a Washington taxpayer showed up at the collector's office with a notice that his water bill was delinquent—plus a receipt proving the bill had been paid. "Irregularities" in four other bills later turned up, officials said.

The bill had been receipted with a hand stamp. Use of the hand stamp to receipt bills is rare, officials said, and the practice is to employ one only when the machine for receipting bills is out of order.

The Commissioners promptly called in all hand stamps, leaving only three outstanding in the possession of top officials.

Next key development in unearthing the shortage came yesterday morning when the suspected cashier arrived for work in the collector's branch office at Municipal Center.

He saw that a representative of the District Auditor's Office, assigned to investigate the water bill mixup, was in the room.

The cashier left the office at once. Commissioner Mason said the cashier called his superior by telephone a short time later and admitted he was short in his cash. Mason said the call was made to Lamon Davis, assistant chief cashier in charge of the office.

Mason said the suspected cashier told Davis he was on his way to confer with George H. Kidwell, acting Collector of Taxes. He did not arrive for such a conference.

Instead, officials said, he was believed to have left town to try and

Draft to Take 15,000 Men In November

Quota to Be 30,000 A Month by '49; First Call for 25-Year-Olds

By The Associated Press

The Nation's new peacetime conscription is expected to put about 15,000 draftees in uniform some time in November.

Army and Selective Service officials are working closely together to decide who will be called and when. No definite date has been set for inductions, Maj. Gen. John E. Dahlquist, deputy director of personnel and administration, said yesterday.

But he estimated 15,000 men will be inducted in November with a gradual build-up to 30,000 men monthly by next year.

The first group to be called will be the 25-year-olds, with younger men being drafted thereafter. Everyone between 18 and 25 must register starting August 30, but only those 19 to 25 are liable under the draft law.

Some 8000 25-year-olds will be taken out of an estimated 1,200,000 in that age group. Selective Service officials believe deferments for veteran service, marital status and other reasons will run very high in the older group.

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, draft director, told a reporter he expects a lot of deferments will be sought.

Only about 70,000 men will be drafted in the ages between 22 and 25, it has been predicted. Officials expect the bulk of the draftees to come from men under 22.

Ferguson Hits Clark's "No" To Data Plea

Says His Committee Earlier Got Go-ahead Signal for Inquiry

Senator Homer Ferguson and Attorney General Tom Clark grew farther apart than ever yesterday over their respective investigations of Communist activities in this country.

Clark, in a letter made public Sunday, refused a new request by the Michigan Republican for Government employment data about William W. Remington, suspended Commerce Department official.

The Michigan Republican, who was elected to the Senate after establishing a reputation as a prosecutor and who is known to hope to succeed Clark, promptly took issue with Clark over this assertion in the attorney general's letter:

"Just how much damage has been done to these efforts to arrive at a sound basis for prosecution by the open hearings which have been conducted is difficult to say." (This referred to Federal Bureau of Investigation study of Communist activities).

Retort by Senator Ferguson

At Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Ferguson told a luncheon club yesterday that Clark's office gave the go-ahead in June to the Congressional spy hearings.

"The facts are clear that as early as June 9, 1948, we had taken up with Clark's office this question of open hearings and received word that it would not in any way interfere with their work," Ferguson said.

"It is difficult now to understand why this (Clark's) letter today, after this long delay and particularly since the President indicated all knew Miss Bentley was a 'red herring' and amounted to nothing."

Ferguson's reference was to Miss Elizabeth T. Bentley, who told Congressmen that Remington gave her secret information during the war, and that she passed it on to Soviet

Rail Worker Rides Bus 124 Miles With Broken Neck

Atlanta, Aug. 16 (AP).—A Southern Railway machinist told today of riding 124 miles on a bus with a broken neck and holding his head with his hands.

The machinist, Erwin Carlisle, 36, of Atlanta, said he was injured in an automobile near Phenix City, Ala., August 1, and feared he would die if he did not receive specialized medical treatment.

For Carlisle the ride was "endless over crooked roads. I prayed to God that I be allowed to live long enough to reach Atlanta." Carlisle was admitted to Grady Hospital here last Monday.

His condition at Grady, where he is flat on his back with his neck and head in a brace, was listed as serious.

Mental Experts of World Seek Permanent Peace Plan

From Press Dispatches

London, Aug. 16.—Mental specialists of the world today took on the tremendous task of finding a formula for permanent world peace.

After the opening session of the first International Conference on Mental Hygiene today it was apparent that psychiatrists, psychologists and other mental experts from more than 50 nations are agreed they must organize an assault on war, which, they believe, derives principally from the minds of men.

Dr. Carl Binger of Cornell University told the 2000 delegates today that "if it is given to us to find the right answers to some of these problems (what makes wars) then we must use our psychological insights to persuade statesmen and politicians to give us a hearing and to act on our findings."

In addition, the mental hygienists set themselves the task of building an "intelligence cyclotron"—a sort of brain smasher—to destroy international prejudice.

This idea was put forward by Dr. Frank Fremont-Smith of New York, vice president of the International Committee for Mental Hygiene.

"Just as the physicists, chemists, engineers and mathematicians needed to collaborate in order to build the cyclotron for the release of atomic energy, so must we, the specialists in individual and group behavior, join forces to forge a different kind of cyclotron.

"It would be one that will use the powerful rays of human intelligence to penetrate the tough outer shell of suspicion, prejudice and hostility, and thus release the untapped energies of good will and cooperative effort which lie in the heart of man."

A report to the Congress declared today that every statesman should have his head examined before being turned loose in the maze of international relations.

Twenty-four scientists, who are psychoanalyzing the world, said in the report that every civil servant should have a mental test along with the usual examinations on ability to read, write and add.

Dr. Fremont-Smith, commenting on the report, said nations should have staffs of psychiatrists, just as they have atomic scientists on their payrolls.

"Can man's increasing understanding of his own behavior save

Beltsville Pullet Has 2 Mothers, 'Father' Is Joint Effort of Flock

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A 3-pound white pullet with pea comb is strutting around the chicken yard at the Agriculture Department's poultry experimental station at Beltsville, Md.

It is no different from other chickens except that it has two mothers and a flock of fathers.

It should strut, because it is getting world-wide attention.

Colored motion pictures of its conception—if it can be called that—are now on their way to the World's Poultry Congress at Copenhagen, carefully protected by Paul Zumbro, American delegate from the Bureau of Animal Industry.

Here's how it was made:

An infertile ovum was taken from the ovary of a White Leghorn hen and placed in the oviduct of a Rhode Island hen. Then it was fertilized by treated sperm taken from a flock of Dark Cornish roosters.

The Rhode Island hen provided the food for the growing embryo and added the egg white, the two shell membranes, as well as providing the place where fertilization was accomplished.

In the operation, the Rhode Island Red was put to sleep with anesthetic. The unfertilized ovum was put into the open upper end of the sleeping hen's oviduct or egg-laying tube.

The fertilizing of the hen was

Consul Blames White Russians, U. S. Officials for Woman's Fall

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—Soviet Consul General Yakov M. Lomakin charged tonight that "White Russians" were responsible for the leap from a consulate window of Mrs. Oksana Stepanovna Kosenkina, Russian chemistry teacher.

The Soviet official claimed, in a news conference at the consulate, that White Russians previously had kidnaped and drugged Mrs. Kosenkina.

Further responsibility for her plunge last Thursday from the consulate, Lomakin said, lay with American officials whom he accused of actions and statements which led to what he termed a "nervous breakdown" by Mrs. Kosenkina.

Lomakin admitted newsmen to the consulate early tonight, picked up a sheaf of typewritten pages, distributed them and said:

"This is our answer."

Mrs. Kosenkina, now under subpena of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, is a patient at Roosevelt Hospital. Her condition was described today as slightly improved, but still critical.

She suffered numerous injuries in her leap from the consulate after a stay there of five days.

Consular officials said they had "rescued" her from a White Russian (anti-Communist) camp at Valley Cottage, N. Y., on August 7. They denied she was held at the consulate against her will.

The Valley Cottage estate is operated by Miss Alexandra Tol-

Canadian Chiefs, Forrestal Confer

Ottawa, Aug. 16 (AP).—United States Defense Secretary James Forrestal met the big men in Canadian defense for two hours today for "aprofitable, interesting and useful exchange of views which I hope will continue in the future."

Nothing more exciting than that emerged from a brief news conference that followed the United States Defense Secretary's meeting ith the defense committee of the Canadian Cabinet, and its top advisers.

Defense Minister Claxton told reporters that "all aspects of defense cooperation" were discussed. He added:

"One of the most satisfactory things for us was to find out how much the planning of the two countries is moving along the same lines."

Canadians at the meeting, besides Claxton, were External Affairs Minister St. Laurent, Finance Minister Abbott, Trade Minister Howe, the four Chiefs of Staff, Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Canadian co-chairman of the Joint Defense Board, L. B. (Mike) Pearson, External Undersecretary, and A. D. P. Heeney, clerk of the Privy Council.

The news conference produced questions about such things as standardization of arms and the U. S. bases in Newfoundland, but they got no spectacular answers.

Forrestal asked if Canada had an official secrets act, and Claxton said, "Yes, that's the one we used to get our Russia spies."

Forrestal grinned. "No spies here, I guess."

Claxton turned to find a sombre Russian Tass News Agency reporter at his elbow.

Indicted Reds Denied 2d Stay of Trial

New York, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—Federal Judge Harold Medina refused today to extend until after the November elections the case of 12 key Communists indicted for plotting to overthrow the Government.

The Communists had asked an extension from August 23 to November 28 to file motions questioning the constitutionality of the Smith Act, under which they were indicted. Medina granted an extension until September 27, but refused to postpone the case until after the elections.

United States Attorney John F. X. McGohey said undue delay would "permit the defendants to continue the very things they are charged in the indictments with doing."

"If we let them do that sort of thing they will destroy the Government," Medina said. "I think the case is important to the defendants, but the interests of the Government and the people are a little more important than the interests of the defendants."

Abraham Unger, counsel for the defendants, protested that they were not charged with any specific acts in the indictments.

"No, they merely want to wait until they get everything set," Medina commented. "Then the acts will come. The quicker this case gets disposed of with finality, the better for all concerned."

U. S. Exports To Soviet Fall

American exports to Russia dropped under $50,000 in June. This compares with $200,000 in May and a monthly average of $6,900,000 earlier in the year.

American purchases from Russia amounted to $7,400,000 in June, about the same as in May.

The figures were disclosed yesterday in the Commerce Department's regular monthly report on foreign trade. This showed June exports to the Soviet sphere were $8,400,000 compared with $5,700,000 in May. The increase was largely because of bigger shipments to Finland.

The total of June exports to eastern Europe, however, was less than a third of the average monthly shipments in the first quarter of 1948 because of the closer scrutiny now given to exports which might have potential military use.

story that when he renounced communism he went to Hiss' home here and pleaded with the State Department official to do the same. Hiss, the witness stated, was so emotionally moved by the plea that he had tears in his eyes, but did not act upon the plea.

Hiss, publicly before the committee and again yesterday in executive session, has sworn under oath that no such incident ever took place, that he did not know Chambers and that Chambers never was in his home.

It is this particular aspect of the diametrically opposed testimony that the committee would seek to resolve through a lie detector test.

agents. Remington has denied giving her secret information.

William P. Rogers, chief counsel to Ferguson's subcommittee, told The Washington Post yesterday that Clark's intimation that the open hearings had harmed the Justice Department's investigation was "unjustified."

"At every stage of the proceedings we have checked with the Attorney General's office beforehand," Rogers declared.

"We have told his assistants whom we planned to question, when we planned to question them, and what information we hoped to bring out, and there was no objection."

Rogers added that a more detailed reply to Clark would be made in a letter to him which may be made public today.

Rogers pointed out in a letter to The Washington Post published Sunday that Ferguson, in requesting data on Remington, had not asked for anything relating to the FBI's informants, sources of information, or investigative techniques.

Loyalty Program Angle

Ferguson's letter, Rogers pointed out, reminded Clark that Remington, while under investigation had been transferred to three different top confidential positions in the Government where highly guarded strategic information of particular interest to the Russians was fully disclosed to him."

The Ferguson-to-Clark letter went on to say that this indicated a breakdown in the United States loyalty program, and reminded the Attorney General that the Senate inquiry is aimed to learn how such a thing could happen, who was responsible, and how such things could be avoided in the future.

"With this purpose in mind the committee desires to find out (1) if the interested Government agencies involved were notified of Remington's alleged espionage activities, (2) in what manner, to whom and when was such notice given, (3) what action was taken by Remington's superiors upon receipt of the information."

Prober's Disclaimer

It was at this point that Ferguson denied wishing to hurt the loyalty program, and asked deletion of any data about informants, sources, and methods.

Clark's reply said in part:

"I wish to point out that the case here presented is not only one in which the loyalty of an employe of the United States has been questioned, but one in which there were allegations of espionage on behalf of a foreign power. I am sure that you will realize that information relative to the procedures under which cases of alleged espionage within the Government are handled would be of very great value to any unfriendly foreign nation.

"To disclose the manner in which, and the time when, particular officials or agencies of the United States Government receive notice and of the recommendations given; the manner in which the suspected employe is to be treated, and the extent to which he may be permitted to carry on his customary activities; all such disclosures would be of considerable importance to any persons and governments having interests adverse to those of the United States.

"It is the considered view of this department that disclosures of information of this character would not be in the national interest, but would in fact be detrimental to it."

Clark added that he had taken up the matter with the President's office.

Consul Blames White Guard

stoy, youngest daughter of the late Russian novelist, Leo Tolstoy. She has said Mrs Kosenkina sought refuge at the camp.

Lamokin's statement tonight said that after Mrs. Kosenkina "had succeeded in getting away from the hands of the Tolstoy Foundation a White Guard organization, it was noted that the forcible kidnaping of Mrs. Kosenkina by White Guards, the injection of drugs made by them with the purpose of weakening her will as well as the contemptuous treatment of her and her forced work in the kitchen of Countess Tolstoy, the head of the above-said White Guard organization, (had) undermined her health and affected her mental state."

t Valley Cottage, Miss Tostoy said:

"Lomakin certainly persists in standing back of his lies, obviously because he has no other way out. The poor man is so scared he does not know what to say. . . . How can he go back on the lies he has told Molotov in Moscow? It is absurd for anyone to take him seriously."

The consul general said Mrs. Kosenkina was frightened by a crowd which she saw outside the consulate window on the afternoon of her leap.

She cried out, "It looks as if they are coming to get me," Lomakin said, and then she dashed to the window.

Press and radio accounts of the whirl of events surrounding the teacher "irritated and depressed" Mrs. Kosenkina, the statement said.

Lomakin made no reference to a list of eight questions submitted earlier to him by reporters. The questions were largely concerned with statements attributed to the teacher in the hospital. In one of them, police said, she said she was a prisoner at the consulate.

Earlier in the day, the Russian vice consul flatly denied that the teacher accused him in a hospital-bed statement last Friday of holding her prisoner.

The police had released a version of the exchange between the woman teacher and Vice Consul in which she was quoted as telling the Soviet official:

"You kept me a prisoner; you would not let me go."

Zot L. Chepurnykh, the Vice Consul, told reporters today, "The story is not true."

"She did not say what the police say she said," he insisted. "She didn't say, 'You didn't let me go' and she didn't point at me either."

The police said there would be no comment on the Vice Consul's assertions.

Soviet Rebuffed in Bid To Viet-Nam, Indonesia

Geneva, Aug. 16 (AP).—Russia was rebuffed today in a move to invite Viet-Nam and the Indonesian republic to join in the work of the economic commission for Asia and the Far East.

The United Nations Economic and Social Council defeated by 9 to 4 votes the Russian resolution to invite Indonesia.

Statement of Soviet Consul

New York, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—General statement of Russian Consulate Jacob Lomakin in connection with the Kosenkina case:

IN CONNECTION with the incorrect and slanderous version spread by the American press concerning the case of the teacher, Oksana S. Kosenkina, a Soviet citizen, the Consulate General of the USSR in New York deems it necessary to make the following statement:

After Mrs. Kosenkina had succeeded in getting away from the hands of the Tolstoy Foundation, a White Guard organization, it was noted that the forcible kidnaping of Mrs. Kosenkina by White Guards, the injection of drugs made by them with the purpose of weakening her will as well as the contemptuous treatment of her and her forced work in the kitchen of Countess Tolstoy, the head of the above White Guard organization, undermined her health and affected her mental state.

In the Soviet consulate where she was brought after her liberation from the hands of her kidnapers all necessary measures for restoring her health and peace of mind were taken. She lived among consulate employes, who gave her all their attention and care. She gradually began to recover from the horrors lived through by her and more so she even expressed her will to work at the consulate office while waiting to go to her motherland. The only reason which irritated and depressed her were the increased (sic) in the last days continuous flow of hostile and malicious fabrications of the United States press and radio concerning the future of Mrs. Kosenkina, and threats of the United States police and court through the press and radio that she would be called by force to the American court. All this had a very damaging effect on her mental state and she repeatedly asked the consulate employes: "Is it possible that I may not be assisted in returning home? I want to go home as soon as possible because I am afraid of being caught again by these White-guard fiends."

As is known, the office of the Soviet Consulate, during Mrs. Kosenkina's presence there and, especially during the daytime, was surrounded by a big crowd of correspondents, photographers, policemen and some strangers. All this took place before the eyes of Mrs. Kosenkina.

DESPITE repeated appeals from the consul general to the police authorities that some steps be taken to keep away intrusive crowds from the consulate, the crowd kept gathering in front of the consulate. All this worked on Mrs. Kosenkina's nervous psychic condition while she was still under the effects of the horrors which she has undergone.

The slanderous statements against Mrs. Kosenkina made by the White Guard, Weinbaum, Toltoy and Zenzinov, which became known to her over the radio and press and finally the official statement of Judge Dickstein of the New York State Supreme Court in which he demanded her appearance before the court sharply aggravated her depressed mind.

On August 12, at about 4 p. m., Mrs. Kosenkina was visited by the wives and their children of two consulate employes, who were also her close friends. Mrs. Kosenkina complained to them that she could no longer stand these persistent and hostile crowds who kept on watching her from the street and also the threats of the police and court authorities to force her to appear in court.

While talking with the women she looked through a window and saw a crowd running from the oHtel Pierre toward the consulate. She ran away with horror from the window and cried: "It looks as if they're coming to get me." Then, losing control of herself, she rushed into the next room and there leaped from a third-floor window.

From the above said, it is clear that the responsibility for everything that has occurred lies with those who organized the kidnaping and committed violence toward Mrs. Kosenkina, a Soviet citizen, as with those American officials who by their actions and statements have thus caused the nervous breakdown of Mrs. Kosenkina which has driven her to the attempt of her despair to the attempt of suicide.

State Department Gets Report From N. Y. Police

By the United Press

The State Department yesterday received a confidential report from New York police to help guide its reply to a Soviet demand for the "release" of Mrs. Oksana Stepanovna Kosenkina.

The department's Voice of America has broadcast to foreign countries that she jumped to escape "slavery and death."

State Department press officer Michael J. McDermott refused to give any details of the New York police report. But he said it is being studied as the basis for an American reply to Soviet charges of alleged "connivance" by United States officials in the Kosenkina affair.

Not Making Own Inquiry

He said the department is making no investigation of its own and is relying entirely on the regular enforcement agencies to make a complete check.

McDermott said the New York police inquiry is continuing, and he indicated that the FBI also is looking into the case.

Next Russian Move Against Tito Eyed

By Kingsbury Smith

Rome, Aug. 16 (INS).—Rumors of large-scale Soviet troop movements in Romania are being weighed in western diplomatic circles today for a possible clew to Russia's next move in the fight with Marshal Tito.

There was no confirmation of the rumors which circulated in western circles in Belgrade over the week-end.

Although western diplomats treated them with reserve, the situation nevertheless is being watched closely.

(In Vienna the British-licensed newspaper Welt Press reported that 15 fully equipped battle divisions are involved in "massive troop movements" in Hungary and Romania. The reports, originating in Hungary, said the Russian troops arrived last week. Welt Press added a squadron of late model Russian fighter planes has been stationed at an airfield opposite the Yugoslav border.)

Western observers in Belgrade are convinced that any Russian military action against the Yugoslav Premier, who has been accused of pursuing "hateful" policies toward Russia, will come through Romania.

Last week, just about the time the first rumors of the Soviet troop movements were received, Foreign Minister Ana Pauker of Romania left the Danube conference in Belgrade for a quick air trip back to Bucharest. She spent 24 hours in the Romanian capital before returning to Belgrade.

Some western diplomats in Belgrade see the possibility that Romania may be incorporated into the Soviet Union to establish a common frontier with Yugoslavia.

There is growing concern in Yugoslav government circles over what Russia intends to do to settle accounts with Tito.

It can be revealed on reliable authority that Ales Bebler, the Yugoslav delegate to the Danube conference, went so far as to ask Sir Charles Peake, the British Ambassador-Delegate, what the latter thought would be Russia's next move.

The view generally prevails in Western diplomatic quarters that Moscow will definitely try to get rid of Tito.

But just how is the big question. The belief is widespread that Tito would fight against either internal or external attempts to overthrow him.

Yugoslavia is estimated to have a regular army of 300,000 men, comprising 38 divisions, and 70,000 shock troops formed into special political divisions. In addition there is a militia of 30,000 men, and a secret police force of 12,000.

The regular army and shock troops are considered fairly well-armed for defensive ground operations, but Tito's small air force is no match for the Soviet air force.

A 'Lion' at the Gate

URBAN SAFARI—This ferocious beast, seen through opera glasses, could be nothing less than a lion on the loose, but to the camera it was just a fox, a very sick one at that. Above, he stands miserably before an iron fence on the edge of Rock Creek Park, unable to run further from the lion hunters

Mrs. Charles S. Du Laney, jr., who lives at 1969 Upshur st. nw., casually glanced out of her window about noon yesterday and saw a strange animal.

Puzzled, for she didn't recognize the species, she whipped out her trusty opera glasses, looked again. The beast focused into a lion—or maybe a lion cub. She called police.

Within minutes, the entire neighborhood, which borders on Rock Creek Park, was in an uproar. Little children were pulled into the safety of their homes; telephones buzzed as the word was spread: "A lion is in the streets . . ."

A scout car wheeled up, police alighted. Mrs. Dan Holland of 1970 Upshur st., over whose yard the animal had crossed, described him. "He had the longest tail I ever saw, but with no hair on it. Like a rope." Police swung into action.

Soon, at the entrance to Pierre Gaillard's estate, The Rocks, on Pierce Mill rd. nw., they sighted the beast. A few minutes later three representatives of the District Pound arrived. Police fell back; the men from the Pound advanced, net, rope and bag in hand: it was a fox, an ancient red fox, weary, ill, bone-thin and dying. "He's old, he's old," a bystander remarked. The fox expired even as it was placed in the Pound truck.

Said Mrs. Du Laney, who had witnessed it all: "I've seen a bigger one than that running loose around here. I don't think that one is what I saw at all. There are more around here."

Police and the Pound men retired gracefully.

U. S. Declines Part in Danube Convention

Belgrade, Aug. 16 (NYHT).—The American delegation to the Danubian conference declined today to participate in the drawing of a new convention for the Danube.

By their refusal, the Americans pave the way for certain rejection by the Western minority of the Soviet-inspired convention. British and French delegations also declined places on the committee.

The seven Eastern states, led by Soviet Russia, already have expressed complete satisfaction with the full text of the draft submitted by Andrei Vishinsky, chairman of the Russian delegation. Every attempt by American, British and French to revise this draft to safeguard freedom of navigation has been defeated.

U. S. Accused

Vishinsky angrily accused the United States of unwillingness to cooperate. It just went to show, he said, what bad sports some big powers, were when they found themselves in a minority role.

In the lengthy debate, Vishinsky developed the thesis that every international court was politically motivated and not to be trusted—unless, of course, the judges were on your team.

This was Vishinsky's answer to British and American arguments that disputes which the Control Commission was unable to solve should be appealed to the International Court at The Hague.

Why should a bunch of judges from Salvador, Mexico, Brazil and China be interested with Danubian disputes? He demanded. It was pure fiction to believe that these judges were above politics, he said.

Briton Replies

A junior member of the British delegation, Charles Fletcher-Cooke, replied that there was a fundamental divergence in attitudes toward justice. Vishinsky's conception could not be reconciled with the Western idea of justice at this conference and perhaps never. Vishinsky regarded justice as an instrument of national policy, he said, whereas the British viewed justice as an eternal value transcending national interests.

He accused Vishinsky of throwing doubts on the high moral character of The Hague Court.

Realizing he had been caught off balance, Vishinsky said he had not meant to impugn the honesty of Hague judges.

Then Russia and her satellites approved a draft article to settle disputes through an east Europe conciliation commission.

French May Invoke U. N., Hague Court on Danube

Paris, Aug. 16 (NYHT).—The French Foreign Office tonight announced it was considering the possibility of taking the whole question of the Danube conference at Belgrade to the United Nations.

4 More Czech Athletes Delay Return

London, Aug. 16 (AP).—Four more Czech Olympic athletes decided today against returning to Communist-ruled Czechoslovakia.

Their decision brought to at least eight the number of Olympic competitors refusing to go back to Communist homelands. Two Czechs and three Hungarians disclosed yesterday that they intended to stay in England, but one of the Hungarians later went back to Hungary.

The Czech Committee for Political Refugees withheld the names for fear of retribution against relatives still in Czechoslovakia.

Council Delays Trieste Talks

Lake Success, N. Y., Aug. 16 (AP).—Action on a Yugoslav charge against the United States and Britain over the Trieste question was postponed again today by the United Nations Security Council.

Yakob A. Malik, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister and Council president for August, adjourned the debate until Wednesday, after the two western powers had reiterated their denial of the Yugoslav accusation. The government of Marshal Tito has charged that the United States and Britain violated the Italian peace treaty in connection with Trieste.

Sir Alexander Cadogan, British delegate, accused Tito of trying to annex the Yugoslav zone of Trieste.

Canadian Navy Officer Gives Russian Major Secret Plan

Installment X

By Igor Gouzenko

The assistant to the Soviet consul at Halifax—a man named Koutsenko—visited Ottawa soon after we arrived there.

Long discussions in private were followed by three exchanges of information by letter—one of which concerned the transfer of aviation plants from the West to the East Coast.

Later, a member of the Halifax consulate, visiting on business, appeared in the dining room and I recognized him instantly as having been trained at Intelligence Headquarters in Moscow, a further indication that Soviet consulates also are nests of trained spy agents.

It is interesting to note that the Halifax consulate had an independent system of contact with Moscow. With our high pressure parallel system in full operation, it seemed needless duplication. This was true, of course, but in line with the Soviet code. Such duplication permitted Moscow to check on the work of its agents much more accurately than if all information flowed through the one channel. For instance, if there was reason to obtain a confidential report on Zabotin, Moscow could get it speedily from the Halifax consul without Zabotin being aware of it.

In July, 1943, less than a month after our arrival in Canada, Zabotin received a formal invitation from the Royal Canadian Navy to visit the naval section at Halifax. Zabotin sent Major Romanov as his delegate, stressing the need of "keeping his eyes open."

Romanov returned in high fettle. I was sitting with Zabotin in one of the reception rooms which was serving as a temporary military attache's office at the Embassy, when Romanov burst in with face aglow. Ignoring me, he exclaimed:

"You may congratulate me on my trophies, Comrade Colonel!" As he spoke, Romanov spread several papers on Zabotin's desk. One of them was, I could read from the inscription in the lower right corner, a detailed plan of the Halifax naval port. At the top, in big letters, was printed: "Confidential."

Zabotin got to his feet, his face mirroring astonishment and disbelief. He even felt the paper with his fingers before glaring at Romanov.

"Where did you get this?" he asked. "You should know it isn't wise to begin snatching secrets from under the noses of Canadian navy officers during such a brief visit. They will certainly be able to trace the loss. . . ."

"But Comrade Colonel!" Romanov interrupted excitedly. "One of the officers loaned me the plan quite freely on condition that I return it. Honestly, I could hardly believe my eyes and ears, but here it is!"

Zabotin bent over the map, studying it closely. After a brief silence he said as if to himself: "Possibly it is false information."

"I thought of that myself," said Romanov, "but I carefully checked the map with all buildings as I was escorted on a tour of inspection around the port. The map is absolutely reliable."

Zabotin said no more at the moment, but had me code a detailed letter to the Halifax consul in which he checked on certain items which Romanov had pinned on the map under the heading: "Explanatory Notes." The subsequent reply verified everything.

"I can't understand the Canadian and American officers we meet here," Zabotin commented to me. "They conduct themselves toward us as they would with their own."

A report was sent to Moscow outlining this "extraordinary piece of work" in connection with the map, which was to follow by the first mail. Moscow eventually telegraphed warm praise, rating the map as "most valuable."

Zabotin's policy was then formulated. He made a rule to encourage candor among Canadian service officers but never to make it obvious. "The less you talk the more they give," he said shrewdly. "You need only learn to listen when they speak. They will tell you everything."

The Soviet colony in Ottawa, ostensibly an isolated paradise in the jungles of democracy and a shining example of efficiency for the capitalistic nation to emulate, soon palled on me. Even as I would breathe the clean, free Canadian air through the steel bars of my cipher-room window, there would come from behind and around me the ugly sounds of bickering, arising from rotten little intrigues that dug into the thin morality crust of the hypocritical USSR Embassy.

Spying was being done on a more or less wholesale basis, and practically all Embassy officers were directly involved with "agents," despite the fact that they were living under Canada's trusted diplomatic immunity.

This spying on Canadians was beginning to make me feel uncomfortable. The arrival of my wife, Anna, from Moscow, the subsequent birth of my son, Andrei, and the supreme contentment of our home had altered my outlook. Candidly, everything about this democratic living seemed good.

We all lived in constant fear of a recall to Moscow in the form of a telegram containing the standard phrase "he is required for other work." The "other work," we all realized, could mean penal servitude in Sibera. We even suspected "friendly recalls" mentioning promotion in rank or service, because too frequently we had heard of the exalted ones "vanishing" immediately after arrival in Moscow. The reason could be some remark or indiscretion that the recalled one had long since forgotten. It could be for charges advanced by an enemy and to which the victim would be given no chance to reply. This Soviet distrust of her own citizens presents one of the weakest points of the system, as well as the most worrisome for one working in a position of so-called trust behind the Soviet "Iron Curtain."

(Tomorrow: Russian spy chief tells Gouzenko there are nine separate intelligence networks operating in Canada in direct contact with Moscow.)

Communist Fifth Column Reported in Western Berlin

Berlin, Aug. 16 (AP).—A Berlin liberal newspaper said today that a Communist "fifth column" is at work in the Soviet-blockaded western sector of the city—preparing for the day they hope the Western Powers will leave.

The Liberal Democratic newspaper Montags Echo said the Communists had prepared a purge list of "hundreds of thousands" of anti-Communists upon whom they will take revenge if the Western Allies quit Berlin.

"The Communist spy system has worked its way, into industrial workers' councils, into commerce into postal and telegraph systems of western Berlin, and there mo[illegible] systematic preparation for 'X-Day'—the day the Communists hope the Western Allies will leave Berlin," the newspaper said.

Appeal to West

The newspaper appealed again to the Western Powers not to negotiate "a new Munich" in the four-power Moscow talks.

"Berlin today stands for Europe," it said. "Even the slightest concession here by the Western Powers would have repercussions throughout Europe—and beyond—which would weaken the stand against aggressive Communism."

[The United Press reported that Montag Echo said Soviet deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky made a recent secret trip to Berlin to order a purge of the German Communist Party, including high government officials and police. No western observer could confirm his visit here. The newspaper added Moscow is bypassing Marshal V. D. Sokolovsky, Russian commander in Germany, for Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky, defender of Stalingrad, who arrived in Germany two months ago. His military command includes Germany and Austria.]

The pro-Soviet German press at the same time declared the Moscow talks can be a success only on Soviet terms.

"The talks can be described as a success if the negotiators succed in establishing a useful basis for common German policy of the four powers," the Russian-licensed Nacht-Express said. "Taking into account all compromises, this must be in the direction of the decisions of the Warsaw Conference of Foreign Ministers."

The Warsaw Conference of Soviet and satellite countries last June denounced the West as "Splitters of Germany" and called for a "provisional all-German government, withdrawal of occupation troops and an early peace treaty with Germany.

[The New York Herald-Tribune reported that the Russians have ordered an immediate harvest in the Soviet zone—whether the crops are ripe or not—in order to make good the Soviet promise to feed all of Berlin. An official British statement said Soviet requisitioning of crops is causing grievous hardships.

[The British also reported that two Russian fighter planes made a pass tonight at a British passenger plane in the air corridor. A British jet plane crash-landed in the Soviet zone and was interned.]

In the face of constant Russian-licened press efforts to belittle the Anglo-American aerial supply line, both British and American cargo planes roared into Berlin in perfect weather today on a 4-minute schedule.

American planes made 313 flights into Tempelhof in a 24-hour period with 2792 tons of supplies, while in the same period the British made 355 sorties into Gatow Airfield.

U. S. Transfers Some Officers From Berlin

Nuernberg, Germany, Aug 16 (U.P.).—Four sections of the United States military government are being transferred from Berlin, it was announced today.

The personnel, armed forces, military court and and intelligence divisions are scheduled to arrive here early in September. Special office also will be set aside for visits by Gen. Lucius D. Clay.

The transfer will leave in Berlin the political affairs division of the State Department under Ambassador Robert Muhphy, Clay and his immediate staff and one or two smaller divisions.

Holdup Nets Bandit $1400

A well-dressed gunman yesterday held up and robbed a central city drug store of at least $1400 after tipping a youth 20 cents to let him in the store.

After holding up the assistant manager, the bandit walked out of the Peoples Drug Store at 11th and G sts. nw. with the money in two zipper bags, which he had casually asked the same youth to get for him.

Police believe he was the same man who robbed the night manager of the Mayflower Hotel Garage of $15 earlier at the point of an automatic pistol. In both cases he made his victims lie down on the floor as he left.

A weekend theft also was reported to police, one by a hairdresser who became a victim for the thirteenth time in 20 years.

The suave holdup man, described as being nattily outfitted in brown, arrived at the drug store about 6:45 a. m., when some 15 employes were in the basement dressing for work. He told Charles Longerbeam, 15, of 727 8th st. ne., who was at the door, that he had a "telegram for Mr. White."

Longerbeam, who told him F. T. White, the store manager, was not there, led him at his request to the assistant store manager, Joseph A. Bader, 50, of 1730 Girard st. ne.

While walking back, the stranger gave Longerbeam 20 cents, which he said was for drinks he had bought at the soda fountain recently. Longerbeam later said he remembered serving the man on Friday.

In the back room, the bandit flashed a Colt .38 automatic, according to Bader, and explained the gun was cocked and the safety catch was off. Bader was forced to hand over more than $1000 in bills and about $390 in change, police estimated.

As Longerbeam was returning to the back room to look for a mop, the bandit said:

"Bring me a couple of bags, will you, sonny?" Without knowing what was going on, the youth brought two overnight bags from a shelf. The "customer" thereupon forced Bader, Longerbeam and the fountain manager, Arthur S. Webb, 46, to lie on the floor, face down.

Martin Loftus, 16, of Greenbelt, Md., who was at the door to admit delivery men, let the man out after he said he was taking the bags "to No. 9 store."

Mrs. Elva F. Houseman, proprietor of the Elsie Beauty Shoppe, 1716 H st. nw., who lives above the shop, told police someone had taken $155.45 in cash, two checks and jewelry valued at $550 from a small safe in the shop.

The thieves, who broke in the front door sometime between 12:30 and 9:30 p. m. Sunday, apparently used about half a pound of cotton from the beauty shop as they twirled the dial of the safe. No fingerprints were found.

Clay Expects West to Stand Firm on Plans

Frankfurt, Aug. 16 (AP).—Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American military governor in Germany, said tonight he expects no change of the western powers' plans for Germany to come out of the four-power talks in Moscow.

He said he expects the western diplomats to stand firm and added: "I know of no intention by anybody to deviate from the present program."

General Clay indicated the west will continue with plans for a west German government until there can be a unified Germany, reflecting the political and economic views of the German people.

Asked about an eventual peace treaty with Germany, Clay said "our Government has always hoped for a quadripartite treaty." At another point he said he expects eventual economic unity in Germany.

Asked whether he considered himself a policy maker or an administrator, Clay answered "policy has always been made in Washington, the operations are in our hands."

Told of reports in Berlin that he and his top advisers will resign if plans for a west German government are abandoned, Clay said: "Soldiers don't resign."

He was asked "just what do the Russians want as a condition for lifting the Berlin blockade?"

He said Marshal Vassily D. Sokolovsky, Russian commander in Germany, had described it as a question of what type of currency should be used in Berlin and what type of government Germany should have.

"But that was never official," Clay added. "It still rests officially on 'technical difficulties.'"

ECA Spurs Trade With $85 Million

Paris, Aug. 16 (AP).—An 85-million-dollar inter-European trade plan is a part of the first quarter's operation of the European Recovery Program, it was learned today.

Procurement of commodities and services to that amount in the European countries taking part in the ERP was announced today for a number of nations.

Belgium, Holland, West Indies and the bizone of Germany got the largest amounts. The 85 million dollars is part of the total $882,400,000 authorized by the Economic Administration for Europe from all sources for the first quarter.

The breakdown is:

Belgium—$19,500,00 for meat, fertilizer, nonferrous metals, iron and steel and industrial equipment.

Belgian Congo—$3,200,000 for inedible oils and fats and nonferrous metals.

French North Africa—$1,200,000 for fertilizer.

Greece—$2,500,000 for food products.

Italy—$4,000,000 for food products and fertilizer.

Luxembourg—$3,000,000 for iron and steel.

Holland—$32,500,000 for food, seeds, nonferrous metals and lumber.

Dutch West Indies—$18,100,000 for petroleum products.

Dutch East Indies—$1,800,000 for inedible oils and fats and other products.

Portuguese West Africa—$100,000 for inedible fats and oils.

United Kingdom—$100,000 for nonferrous metals.

Denmark—$800,000 for food.

Iceland—$200,000 for feeds.

Norway—$4,600,000 for food, inedible oils and fats and nonferrous metals.

Sweden—$2,300,000 for lumber.

Bizone of Germany—$15,400,000 for coal.

Turkey—$4,600,000 for food and inedible oils and fats.

Switzerland—$700,000 for food and industrial equipment.

Greeks Claim Capture of Grammos Peak

Athens, Aug. 16 (AP).—War Minister George Stratos told the cabinet tonight he Greek army has captured the highest peak of the Grammos mountains.

He said divisions of the first army were pushing forward unimpeded by the Communist-led guerilla forces. The guerillas were routed and abandoned their wounded and war material in their unorganized flight from the battlefields, he said.

A general staff statement said 1140 square miles had been cleared in the big general offensive launched June 21 on the Grammos front. Only 135 square miles containing 15 villages are still left to the guerillas, the statement said.

Lycorrahi and Aetomilista, both of which had been headquarters for Communist General Markos Vafiades in earlier campaigns, were captured along with Zerma in the Greek army sweep.

It is not clear whether main guerilla forces are running to Albania or being mopped up by the Greek army.

A general offensive launched June 21 on the Grammos front. Only 135 square miles containing 15 villages are still left to the guerillas, the statement said.

During the offensive, the general staff said, 3830 guerillas had been killed or captured. Greek losses were described as 49 officers and 502 men killed.

Pravda Sees U. S. Attitude 'Hostile'

Moscow, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—The Russian press today blamed the United States for failure of the current "peace" talks.

The press attack on the United States, printed here by the Communist Party newspaper Pravda, was in the form of an official Tass agency dispatch from New York, accusing United States officials of creating a "hostile atmosphere toward the Soviet Union . . . calculated to break up the present talks."

The accusation was contained in a statement issued by the National Council of Soviet-American Friendship, an American organization.

The statement charged that "Our Federal authorities, congressional committees and local law enforcement authorities are apparently doing their utmost to create a hostile atmosphere . . . while our Government is conducting decisive diplomatic conversations with the Soviet Union."

The article was the first comment the Russian press had made on the current talks.

A brief communique two weeks ago reported that Stalin had received the three foreign representatives.

U. N. Warns of Dangers In World Economic Setup

Lake Success, N. Y., Aug. 16 (U.P.).—The United Nations ran up an economic danger signal for its 58 members today by warning that the world is trading less although producing more each month.

In a survey of global economy for 1947 and the first quarter of 1948—before Marshall Plan aid began flowing to 16 western European countries—the U. N. sketched a bleak picture of a world dependent upon the United States—an artificial prop for a shaky economic structure.

The survey was based on data submitted voluntarily by governments and did not include complete figures because the Soviet Union keeps production figures secret.

Disregarding Russia, the world balance sheet disclosed:

1. That world trade, after reaching the level of the base year, 1938, in 1947, slumped to 93 per cent of it in the first quarter of 1948.

2. That world steel, coal, copper, rubber, oil and other industrial production was 35 per cent higher than the base year 1938.

3. That food production was still 7 per cent below 1938.

4. That where the figures showed an improvement over prewar conditions, it was mostly due to the booming American economy.

5. That most countries were running short of dollars and the United States had provided more than 22 billion dollars of the 30 billion dollars in grants and loans made throughout the world from the war's end to June, 1948, when Congress passed the foreign aid bill.

6. That inflationary pressures still were increasing with prices going up, manpower going down and shortages developing in critical items.

The unhealthy economic picture was pointed up by the fact that although the United Kingdom sent 15 per cent more goods to the rest of the world in 1947 than in 1938.

The United States on the other hand, in the first quarter of 1948, did world business at a monthly profit of 509 million dollars, but this was a sharp drop from the 781-million-dollar monthly figure for the first half of 1947.

Loaded B-29 Sets 5792-Mile Record

By the United Press

The Strategic Air Command announced yesterday that a B-29 carrying a simulated bomb load of more than 10,000 pounds set a new record last weekend by flying 5792 miles nonstop from Florida to the West Coast and back.

The long-rang bomber, piloted by Maj. Ralph R. Taylor, used what were described as special "cruise control" procedures for the flight, which required 23 hours and 30 minutes.

Leaving MacDill Air Force base at Tampa, Fla., the B-29 flew to the West Coast, dropped its "bombs" in the Pacific and returned to its base with 317 gallons of gasoline left in its tanks—enough for about another hour of flying.

The Strategic Air Command said the return flight was made at an altitude of more than 25,000 feet.

The plane and crew are from the United States Eighth Air Force 509th Bomb Group, stationed at Walker Air Force Base, Roswell, N. Mex.

While the flight set a new B-29 record, it has been topped by one of the big B-36 superbombers which several weeks ago carried a similar "bomb load" 8100 miles nonstop.

The Navy's "Truculent Turtle," a twin-engine patrol bomber, and the Air Force's "Pacusan Dreamboat," a stripped-down B-29, both have made flights about twice as long as the latest superfortress mission, but they carried no "bomb loads" and packed extra gasoline supplies.

Government Gets Control In Rangoon

Rangoon, Burma, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—This capital of strife-torn Burma appeared firmly in government hands today following weekend air force strikes at alleged Communist insurgents who have blockaded the city since Wednesday.

Rail and inland shipping traffic were resumed on a small scale, relieving some of the tension among Rangoon's 500,000 inhabitants. Kachin troops flown into the city from frontier areas during the past four days also eased the situation.

Government dispatches claimed the recapture yesterday of Twante, across the Donyan River from Rangoon, and said large-scale air attacks had beaten back Communists and army deserters who had ringed the city. What was happening outside the capital was not known.

The situation for the government became critical last Wednesday, when 750 troops of the first battalion of Burma Rifles deserted and seized the town of Prom, just north of Rangoon. They jumped into trucks and headed for the capital, but were turned back by loyal troops.

United Lutheran Church Has 1,880,628 Members

Philadelphia, Aug. 16 (AP).—Total membership in the United Lutheran Church in America has reached 1,880,628 including 41,144 new members enrolled in the past year, it was announced today.

The Rev. Dr. F. Epping Reinartz, church secretary, said the figures were compiled after an "X-ray" survey of the church's 4000 congregations in the United States and Canada.

mankind from self-destruction?" he asked. "This is the great challenge."

The 24 mental scientists who prepared the report believe this can be done. They believe it is absolutely necessary for the world to enlist the aid of mental science at the present time, when everyone is asking whether the human mind can reason itself out of a third world war.

War Held Avoidable

The age old belief "it is human nature" for man to resort to war periodically is false, the report said. Science has shown human beings are the product of their environment and can be guided into less destructive habits, it said.

Social institutions can be modified and ways have been found to prevent "distortions of life" which have lead to outrages such as Adolf Hitler's extermination ovens, the report added.

Viscount Addison, Britain's Lord Privy Seal, echoed Dr. Fremont-Smith's views when he said it is a question whether the human mind and will are prepared to face the responsibility for the use of forces which physical science has made available.

"Wars begin in the minds of men," he said. "It is in the minds of men that the defenses of peace must be constructed."

Dr. Binger later said "Big business and vote getters are making a bugaboo of communism" in the United States, some of them with the idea of starting a war.

He said at a news conference that he believes the State Department is promoting fear of communism with the idea of "defending ourselves against attack," but there are others with a different motive.

"I think there are very many people right now who think a preventive war would be a good thing," he said. "I have been in some medical groups, for example, who have a very great fear of socialized medicine."

'Tokyo Rose' To Face Jury

The Justice Department yesterday decided to go to bat with a treason prosecution in the so-called "Tokyo Rose" broadcasts of World War II.

Attorney General Tom Clark asked United States Army authorities in Tokyo to arrest 32-year-old Iva Toguri D'Aquino and send her to San Francisco to face a Federal grand jury there "at as early a date as possible."

The action climaxes more than three years of investigation. The inquiry, Clark said, indicated that Mrs. D'Aquino, born in Los Angeles July 4, 1916, was one of six English-speaking Japanese women who broadcast over radio Tokyo between 1943 and 1945.

The Attorney General said she was the only American-born woman in the group to which the American armed forces in the Far East applied the collective nickname, "Tokyo Rose."

The feminine broadcasts over Tokyo's powerful radio station became a legend among United States fighting men in the desolate places of the Pacific, to which they were beamed.

Tight Senate Races Get GOP Attention

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 16 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's campaign manager said today the Republicans would devote "plenty of attention" to States where GOP senatorial candidates face tough Democratic opposition.

Herbert Brownell, jr., made that statement after conferring for four hours with Dewey, Republican presidential nominee, and Gov. Earl Warren of California, Dewey's running mate.

Brownell also said that both Dewey and Warren would wage "very active campaigns and travel country-wide." He added that no final decisions have been reached as to when the campaign would open.

Senate Republicans now outnumber the Democrats 51 to 45. Close Senate races are in progress in several States, including Minnesota, West Virginia, Wyoming and Kentucky.

Democrats' 16-Yr. Record Major Talking Point

Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath said last night that the "hard facts" of accomplishment during the past 16 years entitle the Democrats to another crack at the White House in November. He said a "major part" of the Democratic campaign will be to tell the voters in detail exactly what four successive Democratic administrations have meant.

McGrath unveiled this bit of Democratic campaign strategy as the White House confirmed that President Truman will open his formal campaign for election with an address to an AFL-CIO rally in Detroit on Labor Day.

In addition to reciting the accomplishments of the Democrats on a national scale, McGrath said party headquarters has prepared a State-by-State breakdown on what the Democratic administration has meant to farmers, bank depositors, veterans, labor, school children and the unemployed.

Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brannan said he expects to make some speeches in Mr. Truman's campaign. He conferred with the President yesterday. He said he had put himself at the disposal of Senator Hatch, head of the Democratic Campaign Speakers' Bureau.

Stay Sought In Execution Of Wheeler

A court action was taken yesterday designed to prevent the execution of Reginald J. Wheeler, 28, in the District Jail electric chair Friday.

Wheeler was convicted in District Court along with his "lookout," Jesse James Patton, 23, of the robbery murder June 5, 1946, of Maurice L. Bernstein, 52, in his drugstore at 1786 Florida ave. nw.

The case was taken through the United States Court of Appeals to the Supreme Court and President Truman, but the sentence of death was upheld.

However, yesterday Wheeler's attorney, James J. Laughlin, obtained an order signed by Justice Edward A. Tamm of District Court which forbids any change in "custody" of Wheeler pending an appeal on a new point. It is this:

Laughlin contends that the chief justice of the Court of Appeals must sit in all cases. In the Patton-Wheeler case, D. Lawrence Groner chief justice at the time, was not on the bench. Instead, three associate justices heard the appeal. Laughlin insists that this was contrary to the law.

Captive of Indians Now 109

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MAINE GUIDE—Jeremiah Campbellton, who has just celebrated his birthday at Linneus, Me. He is 109. When a boy, he was captured by Micmac Indians, who held him in slavery for 12 years, often threatening to kill him, as they had slain his parents. He has outlived them all. For many years he guided settlers through the Aristook forests into northern Maine

Man at 109 Recalls Life With Indians

Linneus, Me., Aug. 16 (AP).—Jeremiah Campbellton recalled today that fondness of a Micmac Indian maiden for him once nearly cost him his life.

The white-haired centenarian, who was 109 yesterday, said it was the threat to his life 91 years ago that impelled hi mto flee after 12 years with the Indians.

"The chief's daughter liked me," he said. 'She came to me one night and said they were going to kill me. The chief didn't like it because his daughter cared for me.

"I took my canoe and my dog and escaped but they followed me. I got to a settlement and was safe."

The Indians, who had kidnaped him at the age of 6, were encamped somewhere west of Van Buren, Campbellton recalled.

Campbellton believes good living accounts for his longevity. He chews tobacco and smokes an occasional cigarette, but has never had an alcoholic drink. His eyesight, which several years ago appeared to be failing, now is fairly good. Until a few years ago, he still could follow any woods trail.

He says he turned over the first shovel of earth for the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad.

Campbellton fluently speaks Indian, English, French and Italian.

These days he rarely talks of his youth, but occasionally sings hymns and tribal songs.

Old-timers recall that Campbellton made canoes of birch bark and moved his family from village to village by hand sled.

One of his favorite methods of preserving meat, they recall, was in a hole in the ground lined with birch bark.

Campbellton became ill several weeks ago, but recovered after fasting for six days.

"Mr. Campbellton said, 'God told me not to eat,'" a relative said today. "For three days he wouldn't touch a morsel of food, so we took him to a hospital. He was there for three days and then he told the doctor 'God told me to eat.' And that was that."

Three years ago he survived a fall downstairs. His doctor said the accident might have crippled the average man.

Campbellton married Delena Arsenault of Fort Kent in 1868. They had 16 children, 7 boys and 9 girls, most of them now dead. His descendants include 11 grandchildren, 9 great-grandchildren and 4 great-great-grandchildren.

Truman Signs Inflation Bill

of a couple with a $100,000-a-year income.

He said he asked for an increase in the national minimum wage law, to help people who earn "only $16 a week," but it also was rejected as inflationary.

"But these men who would protect us from inflation by sacrificing these urgent needs refused to do anything about the excess profits of giant corporaions," he remarked.

"I do not believe that we should fight inflation by putting the average American family through the wringer," the President said.

Urged Program to Aid All

Reviewing the board program he laid before the special session, he commented:

"The record is clear."

"I proposed a balanced program that would protect all—not just the few.

"The Congress talked a lot about who is responsible for high prices, they passed a bill limited to one subject only—credit controls—which is but a tiny fraction of what we need.

"Then the Congress went home."

While emphasizing that he did not call Congress back to Washington to "hold a debate to settle the blame" for high prices, Mr. Truman said, "I think the record is clear on this too."

It was the Senate Republican whip (Kenneth S. Wherry of Nebraska) he said, who stated, "It was the Republican leadership in the Senate and the House that was responsible for ending OPA."

In another sharp sideswipe at Wherry and Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), who led the 1946 fight against OPA, Mr. Truman said rising prices "demonstrate the foolishness of those who argued two years ago that prices would take care of themselves if only we would get rid of price control.'"

He repeated his recent warning that the controls he requested "are needed now, are needed badly."

"Unless inflation is checked, the situation will get even worse and we shall invite economic collapse," he said.

The bill gave Mr. Truman all he asked in the way of consumer credit curbs, but fell short of his request in the bank credit restrictions. It authorizes the reserve board to increase reserve requirements on time deposits by 1½ per cent (compared to the present 6 per cent) and on demand deposits by 4 per cent (compared to a sliding scale ranging from 14 to 26 per cent, depending on size of city at present). Mr. Truman asked for increases of 4 and 10 per cent, respectively.

"The Congress in passing this law failed to meet its responsibility to the American people," Mr. Truman said.

"This bill represents the feeble response of the Congress to the demands of our people for strong positive action to relieve us from the hardships of exorbitant prices and to protect us from the inflationary dangers which threaten our prosperity, Mr. Truman said.

"The failure to take adequate measures in this critical situation is final proof of the determination of the men who controlled the Eightieth Congress to follow a course which serves the ends of special privilege rather than the welfare of the whole Nation."

His Way the "Right" Way

Mr. Truman reviewed the anti-inflation measures he asked for—an excess profits tax, allocation of scare materials, price controls and controls on credits. Then he said:

"The Congress said 'No' to my program. They had no program of their own. They made excuses and called names and argued about who was to blame for inflation but they did nothing effective to control it."

There is a righ way and a wrong way to fight inflation, he went on. The right way, he said, is to strike hard at the trouble spot which represent the excesses of inflation, and at the same time, to help the people who are its victims.

His proposals, the President said, would have done just that.

"These measures would prevent some people from getting too much and would help others to get enough. They would put our whole economy on an even keel and thus would help everybody in the long run."

Four Questioned In Beach Murders

Ormond, Fla., Aug. 16 (U.P.).—Four suspects were questioned today about the "murder by moonlight" of a blonde secretary and her escort on the local beach.

Two of the suspects were over 6 feet tall and wore "large-sized shoes."

Prime clews in the search for the killers of Mary Hucks, 24, and Gregory Blount, 23, were two sets of footprints found around the palmetto clump where her nude and ravished body was thrown.

One set was made by a size 13 shoe. From that, authorities deduced one of the killers was over six feet tall and weighed more than 185 pounds. The smaller prints indicated a confederate about 5 feet 8 inches and weighing 160.

The four men were arrested in Sarasota. One carried a .22-caliber pistol—the caliber of the weapon believed used in the slaying of Miss Hucks and Blount.

Friends of Miss Hucks, a stenographer from Atlanta, and Blount, a former University of Kentucky student from Lexington, said the couple went to the beach Saturday night to watch the turtles lay eggs in the sand by moonlight.

Police believe the couple had fallen asleep on the beach and the killers had killed Blount with a close-range shot through the head.

The girl apparently was awakened by the shot and fled for her life, only to be overtaken, raped and killed.

Hypodermic Babies Seen In Future

DR. EARL E. DUDDING
Octogenarian Retiring

Full of vigor and the secret of "hypodermic babies," Dr. Earl E. Dudding at 87 is writing finis to what he calls the "34-year hard luck story."

As he officially steps down as director of the Prisoners' Relief Society, which he founded in 1914, Dr. Dudding will devote his abundant energies not only to amusing his youngest child—born when he was 82—but to dunning Congress for a cool one million dollars.

A former convict himself, Dr. Dudding's current interest in the sphere of science and welfare is a scheme for setting up a nationwide chain of clinics for treatment of alcoholism in former prisoners.

Thousands Helped

"I've helped many thousands who lost their stake in life," the bald, gaunt octogenarian confided yesterday.

"It was in 1924, when our Society was located at 509 E st. nw., that I realized the big problem with most convicts trying to get back on their feet was drinking."

He promptly set about finding a cure, with the help of researchers, and claims to have hit upon "methods to overcome the habit-forming effects of chemicals in alcohol."

If Congress will appropriate one million dollars—and he expects it will—the Prisoner's Relief Society will campaign for four million dollars through donations, Dr. Rudding said.

The money will be used to establish the chain of clinics on farms throughout the country. Freed convicts given to excessive imbibing will get "first lessons in farming, good food, discipline and sleep."

Furthermore, they will be given treatments, the nature of which Dr. Dudding says is known only to himself, his associates and Congress.

Dr. Dudding was convicted in 1909 of manslaughter in the death of an uncle. He pleaded self-defense at the time and has since continued to maintain his innocence.

He served five years in prison and subsequently petitioned the Governor of West Virginia, where he was convicted, to clear his name for the sake of his children.

Admitting that he is "just as good a man as I was at 20," Dr. Dudding brushed aside questions about his theories on "hypodermic babies."

"In 25 years, however, babies will be made in the laboratories," he predicted.

Dr. Dudding made news in 1933 when he purportedly concocted for procreation a serum from a mixture of his own blood and a compound from cherry leaves to "build a race free of sin."

As a result, his wife was expecting the world's first "scientific baby." The child, which was to be named "Chemical," died before birth.

Prosecutor Drops Charge Of Conspiracy

Ellicott City, Md., Aug. 16. (Spl.) State's Attorney Daniel M. Murray, jr., said today he has dropped conspiracy charges placed against 21 men arrested in a gambling raid at Rocway Towers on June 5.

He said he had asked Circuit Court Judge James Clark for permission to drop the charges because he felt "no good purpose would be served by pressing them," inasmuch as 19 of the 21 men were sentenced to prison terms on gambling charges arising from the same raid.

Two of the men, against whom conspiracy charges also had been pending, were acquitted of gambling charges.

All of the men convicted of gambling were sentenced July 14 to one-year terms in the House of Correction, and all are now serving their sentences, Murray said. One defendant, Patrick J. Clark, of Baltimore, described by police as the owner of Rocway Towers, appealed his conviction immediately after sentence was imposed, but later withdrew his appeal.

The elaborate, castle-like structure near Laurel was raided by a detachment of Maryland State Police, who confiscated more than $32,000 in cash and a quantity of firearms.

Korean Talks Open on Giving Natural Wealth to Republic

Seoul, Aug. 16 (NYHT.).—Negotiations for transfer of 80 per cent of the natural wealth of south Korea to the new Korean Republic began here today. They are tied colsely with discussions of continued American military aid and financial support.

The goal is a series of conventions, to be signed by American and Korean government representatives setting up the new republic in business without a cent of national debt, and with an income sufficient for its needs if properly administered.

The authority of the republic proclaimed here yesterday as yet extends only to south Korea. The Russians refused to permit election of members of the national assembly in North Korea, which they occupy.

Control of the 50 million dollars not yet expended of funds voted by Congress for aid to Korea is one of the things to be transferred.

No formal announcement of withdrawal of the American occupation forces is expected before the signing of the conventions.

More than half of the women and children of American forces left Korea for home and the rest are expected to be gone within 30 days.

Families Committing Suicide

Harkany, Hungary, Aug. 13 (NYHT) (Delayed).—The descendants of one of the oldest Magyar tribes are relentlessly committing community suicide here in a Hungarian frontier region where they have lived since the end of the Dark Ages.

Although their church warns them that they will soon disappear from the Earth, the families are sticking to their 75-year-old practice of having only one child.

The one-child system has created communities where school rooms are half empty. It was introduced in this rich valley to prevent tiny farm-holdings from being split up by division among several heirs. Division meant impoverishment.

Only three children were born last year among the 279 descendants of the original settlers in the village of Harkany. The old stock of the Ormansag region is uniformly Calvinist.

Records show only 12 children have been born since 1940. The church is fighting the practice, as the Hungarian Communist (workers) Party, apparently without success.

Make these 4 comparisons before you buy any car

COMPARE THE VALUE

Yes, compare the features—compare the prices—and you, too, will come to the conclusion that Chevrolet is first in value. It alone gives Big-Car feature after Big-Car feature for Big-Car motoring results—and gives them at prices which are lower than those of any other car with Chevrolet's strong, sturdy construction and Chevrolet's high standards of quality!

COMPARE THE POPULARITY

You can identify the biggest value in any list of products by picking out the one product which enjoys greatest popularity, year after year. In the field of motor cars, that product is Chevrolet! More people are buying Chevrolets, and more people are driving Chevrolets than any other make of car, again this year as they have done in the total 17-year period, 1931 to date!

COMPARE THE FEATURES

NLRB Ruling Hits CIO Hiring Halls

Randolph Replies

Employer Hits ITU for 'Tough' Plan

Milwaukee, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—A representative of the Nation's commercial printing shops told the AFL International Typographical Union today that its "tough policy" will "not work."

Thomas R. Henry, jr., Detroit, president of the Union Employers' Section of the Printing Industries of America, Inc., addresed the ninetieth annual convention of the union.

He told delegates that union employers want "harmony" with the union. After his speech, President Woodruff Randolph of the union disputed his statement.

"It seems to us that this is the time for the ITU to change directions," Henry said. "It is perfectly clear that a tough policy did not and will not work."

"If we union employers in the commercial printing industry were to smash you you might say you had no other recourse but to fight to the death and to the end. But this is nonsense. We don't want to smash your union. We want to live with it in harmony."

The union has protested provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act and has engaged in bitter strikes against newspapers at Chicago and elsewhere.

Randolph, in commenting on Henry's speech at the close of the session, said the American Newspaper Publishers Association is not interested in harmony, but instead wants to break the union.

"What we are fighting is the publishers' attempt to invoke the Taft-Hartley provisions to wreck our union," he said. "The ITU would be in slavery if it adopted contracts desirable to employers as they are backed up in the Taft-Hartley Act."

He charged that newspapers have "misinterpreted" the objectives of the union in news stories.

A trial examiner for the National Labor Relations Board held yesterday that the CIO National Maritime Union and the CIO American Radio Association violated the Taft-Hartley Act when they demanded continuation of their "hiring halls" on the East and Gulf coasts.

On June 24 another examiner found a similar violation on the part of the NMU in a Great Lakes case.

Now it is up to the NLRB, and later the Federal Courts, to decide whether to accept the examiners recommendations.

The two unions involved in yesterday's cases, along with four other unions, are under court orders not to strike.

These orders, obtained under the National Emergency provision of the Taft-Hartley Act, will expire about September 2.

The hiring hall is the major issue in all these disputes. But on the East Coast it has been almost eliminated as a danger spot because the ship operators agreed to continue the present hiring arrangements pending "judicial determination" of their legality. Reports by trial examiners do not constitute such determination.

In yesterday's cases, Examiner Wallace E. Royster did not rule that a union-operated hiring hall, of itself, violates the law.

But he said the halls operated by the NMU and the American Radio Association violate the law because they discriminate against non-union seamen and, although some non-union seamen are hired through these institutions, this is only in cases where union seamen are not available.

Royster said that both unions, by demanding the hiring halls, violated two Taft-Hartley provisions:

1. That which requires a union to bargain in good faith.

2. That which prohibits a union from trying to cause an employer to discriminate against non-union workers.

done artificially a few days before. The egg developed there was laid normally and put into an incubator.

It hatched out white—the color of its first mother—with a pea comb, a characteristic of the Dark Cornish breed. Apparently the second mother left no physical characteristics to its baby.

The experiment, conducted by Marlow W. Olson, poultry husbandman at Beltsville, settled a long-standing dispute by proving that fertilization takes place in a hen's oviduct and not farther up in the ovary.

Similar Studies Under Way

Olson and his assistant, B. H. Neher, are now at work on other similar studies.

One result of the experiment may be to encourage wider use of artificial insemination among poultry flocks. In this way the best roosters can be used for far more wide-spread breeding that at present.

Artificial insemination with livestock—cattle particularly, has enabled breeders to cull many otherwise non-productive bulls from their herds, saving the cost of maintaining them, and at the same time getting greater use from high-priced, proved sires.

Plant Strike Hits Southern Illinois Phones

Chicago, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—AFL telephone equipment workers struck in southern Illinois today and a CIO union made plans for a nation-wide walkout against Western Electric Co.

Some 400 plant workers of the Illinois Commercial Telephone Co. went on strike over a 35-cent hourly wage increase demand. Commuications in the southern part of the State were tied up when telephone operators refused to cross picket lines.

Burton Saunders, general manager of the company, said the walkout was effective in 90 per cent of southern exchanges, but had not affected northern exchanges, where telephone operators are not organized.

Thyssen Tells German Court He's Penniless

Koenigstein, Germany, Aug. 16 (AP).—Germany's one-time wealthiest industrialist, ailing Fritz Thyssen, claimed today to be the poorest man in the country.

The gray-haired, 74-year-old 6-footer, who says he now is stateless, told a German denazification court here he is 'living off' his friends.

He must answer charges of being a major Nazi offender under the German denazificaton laws at the trial which opened this morning.

The court acknowledged Thyssen's statement he is without nationality and that, since he is stateless, he has no objections to being tried.

Thyssen said emphatically, "I have no intention of regaining German citizenship."

The 330-page indictment is based primarily on Thyssen's memoirs which he wrote in southern France after he fled from Nazi Germany the day World War II broke out in 1939. The book, "I Paid Hitler," which was published in the United States and England in 1940, is being used to prove Tnyssen was partly responsible for Hitler's meteoric rise.

The trial is expected to last three or four weeks.

Thysen is accused of having actively supported Hitler and the Nazi Party from 1923, when he allegedly paid 100,000 goldmarks ($25,000 at the then official rate of exchange) to Hitler and Gen. Erich von Ludendorf.

PLAN A "THRIFTY" MEAL OR TWO AROUND THIS POPULAR DISH...

MACARONI & CHEESE

Baked macaroni streaked with melted golden cheese served piping hot is thrifty idea to plan a meal or two around this week. It's a hearty combination that has an especial appeal to men. You'll find macaroni or spaghetti attractively priced at your Safeway. You'll find your favorite cheese, too, and all your food needs well displayed and marked with typical Safeway low prices.

DOUBLE-QUICK MACARONI

6 oz. macaroni
1 tbsp. salt
2 qts. boiling water
4 tbsp. butter or margarine
3 tbsp. chili sauce
½ tsp. prepared mustard
½ tsp. onion juice
4-6 oz. cheese
parsley

Drop macaroni into the rapidly boiling salted water. Boil vigorously, uncovered, until tender (10 to 18 minutes, depending on variety). Drain in colander or sieve. Turn while hot onto a hot platter. Add small chunks or slices of cheese while hot. Drizzle the melted butter over macaroni, then add chili sauce, which has been blended with the mustard and onion juice. Toss lightly but well. Garnish with sprigs of parsley. Serve immediately. Serves 4 or 5.

Baby's Organ Lack Complicates Case

Chicago, Aug. 16 (AP).—A winsome, blue-eyed baby girl will be examined by seven physicians Sunday morning to determine if an operation might correct a deformity which otherwise may cost her life.

If the doctors' report is favorable, the child's mother, Mrs. Irene Lamphere, 21, will consent to the operation for her only child, little Pamela Frances, 22 months.

Otherwise, Mrs. Lamphere said, she will not give permission for surgery aimed at replacing normally the baby's bladder, which now is outside her body.

In addition to the malformed bladder, little Pamela has no genital organs, Mrs. Lamphere's attorney, Charles C. Cooley, said.

The question of to operate or not to operate has estranged Mrs. Lamphere and Fred W. Lamphere, 23, the baby's father. Mrs. Lamphere has a divorce suit pending. The father went to court last week to seek an order compelling the mother to agree to an operation for the child.

Judge Walter R. O'Malley of Superior Court ordered the specialists' examination for Pamela.

Cooley told Judge O'Malley today that the many reports of favorable operations on children born with external bladders probably do not take into account Pamela's lack of genital organs.

Second Reno Fire-Blast Injures 4

Reno, Nev., Aug. 16 (AP).—A fire and explosion in a gas plant here sent four men to the hospital today in Reno's second major fire in as many days.

A fire and blasts in the old buildings of the lower downtown section yesterday killed five men and injured more than 130 persons.

Today's blaze was at the Ransome Co. on West 4th st. near the city limits.

Company Manager F. A. Martin said the fire started from unknown causes at a point where three employes were filling several 100-pound gas cylinders used for household purposes.

Two of the cylinders blew up, one of them hurtling 300 feet down the highway, narrowly missing Martin and Reno Fire Chief Karl Evans.

Sunday's fire and explosion still were unexplained.

Star's Light to Open New York Anniversary

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—Light from the star Alioth—some 300 trillion miles away—will be employed to help celebrate the golden anniversary of Greater New York.

The light will activate a miniature atomic pile releasing atomic energy to open an anniversary exposition at Grand Central Palace Saturday at 7:30 p. m. (Eastern Standard Time).

The light energy from Alioth that will be used began its earthward journey in 1898—the year the five boroughs were consolidated into New York City.

Dugan Backs I. Lee Potter In Arlington

Arlington County Board Chairman Daniel A. Dugan yesterday announced he would support independent county board candidate I. Lee Potter in this fall's election.

In making the statement, Dugan wrote off the other four announced candidates as either 'machine politicians,' opposed to school progress, or lacking in popular appeal.

Running for the one vacant board seat, in addition to Potter, are Francis J. Clair, H. Herbert Howe, Jacob Bechtel and incumbent Alfred E. Frisbie.

According to the County Board chairman, Potter is the "only candidate" who can beat Frisbie at the polls. He called Frisbie "a judge-appointed machine politician."

Frisbie, a stockbrocker, was appointed last year by the Arlington Circuit Court to fill the board vacancy created by the death of Leo Lloyd.

Dugan described Frisbie, as "a natural enemy of scholastic progress," citing his vote to cut the recommended School Board budget and his earlier association with the Greater Arlington Association, which fought a successful proposal to elect School Board members.

Candidate Clair, a free lance writer, "has publicly stated . . . that he does not believe in nonpartisan local election for which all the civic associations have fought," Dugan declared.

The board chairman dismissed Candidate Howe, United States Coast and Geodetic Survey employe and former Better Government League secretary, "a man of high principle," who can never win an election because he lacks "popular appeal."

And he quoted Jacob Bechtel, retired Arlington carpenter, as having said that the elected School Board "is worse than the old one" which had been appointed by the Circuit Court.

According to Dugan, candidate Potter, an apartment builder, will support the School budget and has no ties to "the antique political machine."

Area Soldier Held at Meade In Slaying

Pfc. John D. Gordon, 24, whose home address was listed as 1103 37th ave., Prince Georges County, Md., is being held in the Fort Meade, Md., stockade while Army officials investigate the slaying last Friday night of another soldier.

The incident occurred at a "Friday the 13th" Dance staged by Troop B of the Thirty-fifth Mechanized Cavalry while on maneuvers at Camp A. P. Hill near Bowing Green, Va.

According to the Army Public Relations office, Gordon engaged in a fight with another soldier. At this point, Pvt. Walter Jones, 18, of Mount Holly, N. C. stepped in to stop the fight, and was stabbed. He died on the way to a Fredericksburg, Va., hospital.

Army records show that Gordon went into the service in September, 1943, was discharged in August, 1945, and recently reenlisted.

He was assigned to the 2284th Quartermaster Truck Company. His mother, Mrs. Henrietta C. Gordon, lives in Durham, N. C.

Stalin Greets Nehru On India's Birthday

New Delhi, India, Aug. 16 (U.P.)—Soviet Premier Josef Stalin sent greetings to India Prime Minister Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru yesterday on the first anniversary of India's independence. It said:

"On the occasion of the Indian national holiday, I beg you, Mr. Premier, to accept from the Soviet government and myself congratulations and best wishes for the success of the Indian people. J. Stalin."

"I thank Your Excellency for your kind message," Nehru replied.

2 Istrian Monks Slain

Tax Collection Office Cashier Disappears in $500 Shortage

obtain money from a relative to cover the shortage.

Police action had not been invoked, Mason said, nor has the cashier officially been suspended from his job.

Teh next move affecting the cashier will come after the audit investigation is complete, officials said.

Shortage in Two Parts

The $500 shortage was in two parts—$400 cash from the suspected person's official box for making change, and $100 estimated as the total of water bills which have been paid but for which the money has not been turned in to District revenues.

Officials thought it likely the shortage might grow in either of two ways.

One would be the appearance of other citizens with receipted water bills on which later delinquent notices have been sent out.

The second would involve Alcoholic Beverage Control stamps—liquor tax stamps—which also are handled at the Municipal Center collector's office. An inventory of these stamps is being made and this inventory is expected to be completed today.

Could Sell Stamps, Keep Cash

Officials said it would be possible for a cashier to sell the liquor tax stamps and pocket the money. For the stamps there is no machine tally comparable to that kept for tax bills by the machines that stamp the receipts, although a continuous count is made of stamps.

These officials conferred with Mason before he announced the shortage; Robert L. Mudd, acting auditor; Acting Collector Kidwell, Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, Charles Stofberg, assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young and Victor Howard, secretary to the District Personnel Board.

Stofberg said it was the first shortage of District funds turned up for about eight years. He said the last shortage was in the collections from dog license fees, totaling about $11,000.

Loss Covered By Bond

Stofberg said no loss would accrue to the District since the cashier is bonded for $10,000 and the bonding company has been notified of the shortage.

Howard said the collector's office would make its recommendation about the cashier based on the facts turned up by the audit. Kidwell explained that what is then done will be directly up to the Commissioners.

When officials were asked what would be done if the cashier does not show up of his own accord, Stofberg remarked, "We'll cross that bridge when we get to it."

Mudd said that "as far as we know only one man is involved" in the shortage. He said the shortage had developed over about three weeks—the period since the last audit check of the collector's branch office.

Transfer to U. S. Blocks Sailor's Wedding to Jap

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 16 (U.P.)—Eugene Hickman, 19-year-old sailor who planned to marry a Japanese girl in Honolulu, has been ordered to permanent duty in the United States, effective August 10, the youth's father, Samuel, said today.

Mrs. Hickman had appealed to President Truman and Navy officials to block their son's proposed marriage.

Negro Killer Is Threatened By Mob of His Own Race

Sylacauga, Ala., Aug. 16 (AP).—A Negro, threatened by a mob of his own race for the shooting of a crippled Negro cab driver, has been transferred to jail here for safekeeping, Police Chief Willis Dean said today.

Dean identified the Negro as Harrel Hamilton, 21, of Birmingham, and said he had admitted the shooting of Willie Cole in Talladega Saturday night.

The police chief said Hamilton also had signed a written statement that he killed J. W. Pike, white taxi driver, in Sylcauga July 4.

Shortly after the shooting of Cole, said Dean, a large crowd of Negroes gathered before the Talladega jail and asked that Hamilton be turned over to them.

Hamilton, he said, was spirited from the jail and taken to Sylacauga.

Cole, shot several times, is in critical condition in a Talladega Hospital.

Virginia to Start Planning for Draft

Run-off Sept. 2

Coaster Car Race Winner Yields Title

The Takoma Park, Md., boy who last Saturday won first prize in a coaster car race open only to Northern Virginians yesterday agreed to give up his claim to the [illegible]—an English racing bike.

And the three judges of the Arlington-Fairfax-Alexandria contest announced they would hold run-offs at noon September 2 for the five top contestants. Matthew Boring, jr., of 7723 Eastern ave., defeated, to determine the new winner.

Arlington Police Sergt. Frank C. Palmer jr., one of the three judges, said young Boring had not understood the powerless coaster car race was for area boys only.

Boring, he said, would explain the mixup at 10 a. m. today to other contest winners when they gather in the Byrd Theater, 104 S. Wayne st., Arlington, to receive their awards.

Class A contest losers who will compete again September 2 will be George Davis, 14, and Donald Williams, 14, both of Lorton, Va.; Russell Sheets, 14, of 919 N. Randolph st., and Edward Diehl of 3610 Lee blvd., both Arlington.

The winner will hold a runoff race with Class B Winner Joel L. Moyer, 12, of 5710 N. 25th st., Arlington, for the top prize.

Like the original coaster car races, the runoffs will be held in Arlington on S. 23rd st., near Arlington Ridge rd. Races were sponsored by the Arlington Optimist Club, Arlington and Fairfax Police Departments and the Alexandria Recreation Department.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 16 (AP).—Preliminary steps for the registration of 240,000 Virginians by Selective Service will be taken today.

Col. Mills F. Neal, State director, will meet in Bristol today with all area draft boards for two two-hour orientation periods. Neal said area meetings will be held in Roanoke Tuesday, Charlottesville, Wednesday; Richmond, Thursday, and Norfolk, Friday.

All but five local Virginia boards were ready to set up shop today, although some still are seeking office quarters, Col. Asher W. Harman, State deputy director of Selective Service, said today.

Colonel Harman said there still were five county boards that had only a skeleton organization. He explained that State Selective Service headquarters was in touch with the boards and expected them to be filled in rapidly.

It is expected that the registration of approximately 240,000 Virginia men from the ages of 18 through 25 years will be held in local school buildings, with the aid of school officials and teachers as registrars. Registration begins August 30 and ends September 18.

Buy a Goat and Cut Milk Prices, Urge Kansas Women

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 16 (U.P.).—Mrs. W. I. Davenport, wife of a carpenter-contractor, and Mrs. W. E. Eisenhart, wife of a physician, today urged "women everywhere" to buy a goat "and bring down the price of milk." They say:

Goats are cheap ($3 to $5).

They'll keep your yard free of grass and weeds; do not cost much to feed.

Each goat will give 1 to 2 gallons of milk a day.

Goat's milk is highly recommended by doctors.

And then, they add, when the price of milk comes down, you still will have the goat as a source of meat for the family dinner table.

14 Injured in Troop Train Collision

North Robinson, Ohio, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—Fourteen persons were injured today when a slow-moving Pensylvania Railroad troop train collided head-on with a freight train a mile east of here.

Of 10 soldiers hurt, only three were held at Crestline Memorial Hospital for treatment. They are Nicholas Vishio, Conshohocken, Pa.; William Neisner, Trenton, N. J., and Charles Montgomery, New York City.

The other seven soldiers and four porters were released after first aid treatment. Most suffered bruises when thrown to the floor.

A railroad spokesman said the engineers of both trains apparently were able to slow their trains before the collision.

Another official said "indications are that the passenger train passed two stop signals."

Board Plans Sanitation, Tax Session

Sanitation problems and a real estate tax survey will be subjects of discussion tonight at a special closed meeting of the Alexandria City Council.

The council will ask Health Officer W. Lewis Schafer, jr., why an open sewer which reportedly ran over a playground at Cameron Valley was allowed to exist in spite of several complaints to the Health Department over a two-year period. Cameron Valley is a Government housing project off Duke st. near Quaker lane, built for Fort Belvoir personnel.

Investigation showed the "playground" was on the property of the man who owned the sewer. But tenants in the area of 172 to 178 Williams st. said a hard rain washed the sewage down the slope into their yards.

The council will also seek information on the report that waste water from sinks and tubs of a house on Duke st., just east of Cameron Valley, is draining into a stream that is the source of the city's water supply.

Four new councilmen, who will take office September 1, will meet with the present council to hear presentation of a report on what's wrong, if anything, with the city's method of taxing real estate.

The new councilmen are Leroy S. Bendheim, Marshall J. Beverley, Roy C. Bragg and Albert A. Smoot.

The report will be made by representatives of the Bureau of Public Administration of the University of Virginia, which has conducted a survey of the city's entire tax structure during the past year.

Tilting Tourney Planned

More than a score of mounted lance-bearing tilters are expected to compete in the sixty-third annual tourney at Marshall Hall Park, Charles County, Md., Wednesday at 1 p. m. In the event of rain, the event will be postponed until the following Wednesday, August 25.

Maharajah Will Repay $10,000,000

Bombay, India, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—The wealthy Gaekwar of Baroda is ready to repay his government the 10 million dollars he allegedly spent on a six-week holiday in Europe and the United States, sources close to the royal household said today.

These sources said the middle-aged Maharajah borrowed the money on a bona fide transaction and had deposited an adequate covering sum before he left on his $1,500,000-a-week vacation.

The Gaekwar appealed to his 2,500,000 subjects not to be emotional.

"I've got the interests of my people at heart," he said.

The Baroda legislature criticized the maharajah for taking such an expensive trip. It demanded that he abdicate.

California Broker Accused by SEC

By The Associated Press

Aureliue F. De Felice, a San Francisco stock broker and dealer, yesterday was charged by the Securities and Exchange Commission with violating the antimanipulative provisions of the Securities Act.

The commission said proceedings have been started to determine whether his broker-dealer registration would be revoked.

The SEC alleged it has information "which tends to show" that De Felice manipulated the common stock of Tonopah Gypsy Queen Mining Co., "creating actual and apparent active trading in said common stock and raising the price for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said common stock by others."

The stock is listed on the San Francisco Mining Exchange.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 16 (AP).—The upward drive in September corn, started early last week, met a wall of resistance today. When the price got above $1.69 selling expanded and the contract fell back rapidly. It closed more than a cent lower.

Trading in September corn was quite active, but otherwise the market simply drifted along in small turnover. Wheat, after being steady most of the day, slumped late in the session. Oats were steady all day. News of immediate importance to grains was absent.

Wheat closed unchanged to 1¼ lower, September 2.23¼@2.24¾; corn was 1½ lower to ⅝ higher, September 1.67¼@1.67; oats were unchanged to ⅛ higher, September 72¾; rye was ½@¾ lower, December 1.76¾; and soybeans were unchanged to 1½ lower, November 2.60½.

The set back in September corn was not unexpected to chart readers, who had predicted this contract would meet resistance around the $1.69 level. Cash corn was ½ to 1½ cents lower in the spot market and thisserved as a background for the selling in September.

New York Cotton

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—Cotton futures were under pressure of liquidation today as traders remained pessimistic over the large cotton supply in prospect this season. Dullness in spot cotton markets and textiles, coupled with uncertainty over the possible congressional revision of high farm price supports next year also influenced selling. Final prices were 70 cents to $3.50 a bale lower today.

Pronounced weakness developed in July and October, 1949, deliveries. The October position reached a loss of $4.50 a bale before recovering some $1.50 a bale on covering orders which found offerings thin. New Orleans was a prominent seller of distant deliveries. The possibility that the cotton carryover next July will be around six million bales, or double the past season, was also a consideration in the selling. Mills were good buyers of nearby futures, while fairly heavy hedge selling in the early dealings appeared to dry up late in the session.

Washington advices indicated that the large cotton crop forecast has spurred the ECA to smooth out its cotton export program and get the staple moving into foreign channels. Some Washington officials want to give China more cotton aid. It was reported. It was estimated that China needs at least 700,000 bales more cotton than currently scheduled for shipment if that country is to maintain textile operations at the current level. Such a plan, however, would likely depend upon new funds from Congress, it was pointed out.

'Mom and Dad' Film Is Well-Intentioned

By Sonia Stein

Sorry, no pornography.

"Mom and Dad," which opened yesterday afternoon at the Dumbarton Theater, turns out to be exactly what the management says—educational and hygienic. Because it is shown only to unmixed audiences (women at 2 and 7 p. m. and men at 9) the picture is bound to attract the curious. Well, they will get both a saccharine story about a teen-ager who gets, as the picture says, into "trouble," and several grim medical sequences showing a normal birth, a Caesarean delivery and some of the more repulsive aspects of venereal disease.

The contrast between the two parts of the film is almost incredible. In an attempt at delicacy and good taste, Hygienic Productions has permitted such repressed dialogue as this to get into the picture:

"Your daughter is in trouble."

"What kind of trouble?"

"Sexual trouble."

"You mean . . ?"

"Yes."

Preaches Hygiene Education

Why they quailed at the use of the word pregnant, or even the perfectly acceptable expressing, "going to have a baby," considering what follows later, escape me.

The romantic story which serves as vehicle for the medical films preaches that parents should give their children information on "social hygiene."

Joan, a pretty and very innocent high school girl, meets and is overwhelmed by an attractive boy visiting in town. Her innocence, according to the story line, is what gets her into trouble. Presumably a girl better versed in the facts would not have permitted licenses. This theory is open to doubt, I suspect, but it's a widely accepted one.

Joan's mother is a meddlesome clubwoman who has already had one of the school's most popular teachers fired for mentioning sex education should be included in the curriculum.

Cast Does Good Job

Joan's story ends rather ruefully, but the teacher is invited to return to school and give a course in social hygiene, which includes the vivid medical pictures mentioned above.

In spite of the triteness of the story and the almost inexcusably vapid dialogue the cast handles it pretty well. Hardie Albright and June Carson are the only two you're apt to recognize.

In addition to the fictional and the factual presentations, there is a lecture part way through the picture given by Elliot Forbes. Forbes travels with the picture, as do three nurses. The nurses are on duty to give assistance to anybody in the audience who faints. (Averages: two women to a performance and 7 to 10 men.) Forbes is there to lend an air of dignity to the proceedings, and to sell books. He peddles a couple of manuals on hygiene, one for "Mother and Daughter" and one for "Father and Son."

In some cities, schools recommend "Mom and Dad" to their students. High school students are admitted. The medical sequences seem a bit brutal for youngsters. And the rest of the film is too inartistic for anybody. It's well-intentioned beyond question, and handled antiseptically enough.

Originally released in 1945, "Mom and Dad" has played 400,000 engagements, but is being shown in Washington for the first time. The engagement will run as long as business lasts and is definitely scheduled for this week and next.

Also making the customers keel over is "The Case of Mrs. Conrad," a March of Time item at the Trans-Lux. Showing the miracle of modern surgery, and intended to reassure prospective surgical patients, the picture averages two faintees per performance with men in the lead. This film actually shows very little of the surgery and doesn't compare in the respect to "Mom and Dad."

But out in front of the theater there's an exhibit of surgical instruments arranged by Vincent Iorio of the Trans-Lux, which makes the knees weak. Genuine instruments on loan from a medical supply company, they are (reading counterclockwise top and bottom): a rivet gun, a saw and a nut cracker . . .

Mr. Iorio, the smelling salts, please.

Club to Hear Harral

3 Drown as Barge Capsizes at Picnic

Toledo, Ohio, Aug. 16 (AP).—A company employes' picnic was climaxed by the drowning of three persons last night when a barge upset and spilled its passengers into the Maumee River.

The bodies of Mrs. Peter Van Klingeren, 47; her nephew, Cornelius Van Klingeren, 9, and James Putinta, 5, were recovered. Fifteen other persons were treated for shock and injuries.

The barge turned over when all those aboard crowded to one side of the flat-bottomed craft.

Prehistoric Cave Discovered in Pyrenees Area

Paris, Aug. 16 (NYHT).—A cavern all but paved with prehistoric footprints, both of men and animals, has been discovered north of the eastern Pyrenees, it was reported here today.

The prints are in an excellent state of preservation. In one place prints made by hands are believed to exist.

The exploration was carried on under Abbe Dominique Cathala. The cave is tremendous and lies in the Minerve District.

The animal traces are believed to be those of bears and hyenas. They are believed to date well back before recorded history.

At Melun, a few miles south of Paris, engineers on Thursday discovered several skeletons, buried in position that suggested the customs of prehistoric men.

Richard L. Coe is on vacation. His column, "One on the Aisle," will be resumed on his return.

AN APOLOGY TO OUR PATRONS

At times there appears upon the motion picture horizon a film that might be best termed an "unknown quantity." It has been proved in the last week that "SHAKUNTALA"—the first feature-length film from India to be shown in the U. S.—is such an "unknown quantity." The uncalculated interest and capacity attendances at the showings necessarily warrant a change in our booking. Therefore, we are holding this unusual and provocative film over for one more week.

We thank you, our patrons, for the many, many gratifying comments and calls you have made relative to "SHAKUNTALA." We shall continue to serve your entertainment desires to the very utmost of our abilities.

In reply to the many who have been waiting to see "LA BOHEME," starring Louis Jourdan, may we advise that it will definitely be shown beginning August 25. Thank you for being so patient.

Killjoy

Without prejudice, as the lawyers say, we find ourselves giving a good mark to Mr. Duncan Lee, the witness who was on the stand Tuesday at the Mundt hearings. He could not remember anybody who was at the cocktail party given by Mary Price at which he met Elizabeth Bentley. A killjoy, no doubt, from the standpoint of the committee and the audience, but a man of sensibility.

Molotov's Dither

It is obvious that Molotov exhumed the Dreher case for the purpose of blanketing the case of the Russian teachers in America. The incident occurred in April, and Lieutenant Dreher soon afterward left Moscow, his term of service as assistant naval attache having expired. He had applied for an exit visa before the incident. What he did or did not do is beside the point. All naval and military attaches are in the business of collecting intelligence. If they can get a secret, so much the better, so long as they are not found out. The practice is so old and so customary in all countries that only a Rip van Winkle and a teenager attending the Mundt hearings would imagine that it is irregular. Hitherto there has been a sort of general understanding extending centuries back that no fuss is made when an agent or an attache is caught redhanded. In this case, however, the circumstances, as given out by the State Department, would indicate that the incident was planted.

A revelation which is so transparently a camouflage indicates a certain amount of dither in Moscow about the case of the Russian teachers. Evidently the Muscovites realize the blunder committed by their emissaries. One can imagine the comeuppance that awaits both Ambassador Panyushkin and Consul General Lomakin when they get back to Moscow. But, though Molotov doubtless would love to get his hands on them, his diplomacy of backing them forbids recall. The State Department ought to satisfy Molotov's more natural inclinations, though not before bringing charges of abduction against Consul General Lomakin. The Department of Justice ought to refresh its knowledge of international law. A consul's rights are different from an ambassador's, and he has no immunity. The need is to show the Soviet Union that America is master in its house, and the rest of the world that Molotov's browbeating, of which the Dreher case is the latest example, will not prevent America from asserting that authority.

National Guard

The recent proposal of a special Defense Department advisory committee to bring the National Guard under Federal control has much logic on its side. But the present psychology of the Nation is all against it. Perhaps, if it were feasible now to rebuild the Federal system from scratch or to plan ideally for the future without cognizance of the past, federalization of the Guard would seem natural and desirable. But the tradition of States' rights runs deep and strong, and the maintenance of State control over National Guard units stands as a vital symbol of these rights. The reaction of Maj. Gen. Ellard A. Walsh, president of the National Guard Association, to the advisory committee's recommendation is an understandable one in this context. It has the support, moreover, not only of sentiment but of a good deal of common sense as well.

The States still have some need for militias of their own in time of peace. If the National Guard were taken over by the Federal Government, it seems probable that some sort of home guard would have to be developed to take its place. The chief argument against State control of Guard units lies in the delay and difficulty under present circumstances likely to attend their integration into the Nation's defense system in case of emergency. Congress must first authorize national use of Guard troops and the transfer of Guard property and equipment to the Federal Government by the individual States. This is an objection which can be rationally overcome along the lines suggested by General Walsh. He points out that delay could be eliminated, or at least minimized, by amending the National Defense Act, so that the National Guard will pass instantly to the Army and Air Force in the event of war, without waiting for congressional action at that time. And so far as the caliber and training of the National Guard are concerned, the Defense Department can shape these as well under State as under Federal control—through the quality of the equipment and instruction it supplies and through the standards it sets for the commissioning of National Guard officers.

Babe Ruth

In his own field, which was not such a narrow one, Babe Ruth had the kind of preeminence that belongs to Shakespeare or Michelangelo. He may have been vain, prodigal and in a way barbaric, but there was the stuff of greatness in him and he knew it. Others abide comparison, but there was only one Ruth. There had never been anybody like him, and there never will be again. As a pitcher he would almost certainly have surpassed Mathewson and Johnson; as an everyday player his uniqueness was such as radically to alter the character of a game that already seemed to have achieved its teleological perfection of form.

More than that, he rescued professional baseball from what seemed its decadence and transformed it from a modest and somewhat specialized enterprise catering to a relatively small group of enthusiasts into a vast industry which rivaled Hollywood, the comics and the criminal courts for the interest of the masses and the respectful attention of the press. He introduced the era of four-cipher salaries, million-dollar stadia and professionally organized ballyhoo. He was by far the greatest celebrity of an era which probably produced more of them than any other in history; and his glory remained long after that of Rudolph Valentino, James Branch Cabell, Samuel Insull, Dr. Watson, Charles E. Lindbergh, Big Bill Thompson, Aimee Semple McPherson, Andy Volstead, Tom Heflin, Jimmy Walker, Floyd Collins and President Stillman of the National City Bank had grown dim or had vanished. It was, after all, a more authentic glory than any of theirs. Some of his exploits have the flavor of an heroic mythology, such as the World Series game in which he spotted Charlie Root of the Cubs two strikes and kept his promise to knock the next good pitch over the center field flagpole.

In his private personality the Babe certainly typified the high, wide and handsome genius of his heyday. Some of his extravagances would have startled a Tsarist grand duke or an Indian maharajah of the epoch which preceded it. He bought automobiles by the dozen and silk shirts by the gross and gave them away almost as rapidly as he acquired them. He could lose more money in a single evening at the gaming table than most men see in a lifetime. In less than a half dozen years more than a half million dollars went in and out of his hands with nothing to show for it except a few newspaper headlines when his escapades became bizarre enough to attract attention in an age when the bizarre was the commonplace. His prowess as a glutton almost equaled his prowess as a batsman; at a single sitting he would devour enough beer and pork chops to provide a banquet for a regiment of famished lumberjacks. Even his notion of humor, which usually took the form of practical jokes, had a kind of heroic cruelty.

But throughout everything the Babe retained a kind of innocence and primordial simplicity that his countrymen found utterly irresistible. In almost every American household which included at least one small boy he had a status little lower than divinity. And this was one responsibility that the Babe attempted to take seriously; when all other arguments failed, the reminder of his obligation to the boyhood of America could usually shock him into a semblance of prudence and decorum. His native emotional generosity was easily touched; he would go to almost any sort of trouble to give whatever pleasure was possible to his young devotees, especially those who were sick or crippled.

In short, in his spontaneous sentimentalism, no less than his technical prodigies and personal prodigalities, the Babe seems to have typified the American of his generation. Perhaps he typified it, too, in what appears to have been his premature old age. But about the epoch as about the Babe himself there was wonderful largesse, which went far to redeem its now incredible follies and vulgarities. It was an age in which men tossed about gargantuan virtues and vices like the scoop of a steam shovel, and the Babe, its greatest avatar, might well have been the envy of a tradition, which, like Mr. Eliot's Prufrock, had "measured out its life with coffee-spoons."

The Olympics

About all that remains to be said about the Fourteenth Olympiad at Wembley, England, is that it was concluded with less exacerbation of national feelings than most. As was expected, the Americans again took away the largest share of honors and awards, despite the absence or disability of some of the stars. At several points a good deal of tension developed over the decisions of the judges. Happily, only two such incidents seem to have involved American contestants.

One of them was the disqualification of the United States team which won the 400-meter relay race and the award of the first place to the British team. There seems to have been a good deal of astonishment and anger over this ruling, and a formal protest against it was entered. The bitterness it engendered might have provoked incidents in the later contests had not the ruling been reversed by the judges after they had examined a moving picture record of the race. But even the reversal created a ticklish situation; for the members of the Italian team which had gained second place by the disqualification were then obliged to hand over their silver medals to the British, who of course were required to give the gold medals to the Americans.

The other incident was the award of victory in one of the featherweight contests in the boxing tournaments to an American Negro, Eddie Johnson, on leave from the Army. The contestants were, however, pretty evenly matched; the bout was a close one and the sympathy of the crowd was largely with Johnson's opponent, a Uruguayan. The decision was greeted with howls of anger or derision and in the arena there was an angry demonstration by the Uruguayans which seemed for a time quite likely to turn into a riot.

All in all, however, the Fourteenth Olympiad came closer than most to evoking that international sportsmanship and fellowship the games are supposed to foster. For this most of the credit belongs to the British hosts who gave the affair an expert stage management which has been so frequently lacking in other Olympiads. Their success in this matter does them all the more credit, since there is little doubt that the national sensibilities were somewhat lacerated by the failure of the British contestants to make an impressive showing.

Battle Of The Budget

No one is likely to lose any sleep over the political battle of the budget which has got under way with President Truman's deficit-predicting statement and the extravagant surplus forecasts of appropriations chieftains on Capitol Hill. It is a battle of words in which guessing about the future plays a major part. The President guesses that the country will close the fiscal year 1949 with a deficit of 1.5 billion dollars, although he admits that he may be wrong. Chairman Bridges of the Senate Appropriations Committee more positively asserts that fiscal 1949 will produce a surplus of not less than six billion dollars. We shall not be surprised if both estimates prove to be wide of the mark, although the President appears to give far more weight to facts and ascertainable trends than do his Republican critics.

Reason No. 1 for the wide discrepancy between these estimates is the "bookkeeping device," as the President called it, by which Congress reached back into the 1948 surplus and took three billion dollars to pay part of the 1949 expenditures under the European Recovery Program. This maneuver served no other purpose than to make the 1949 budgetary picture look better on paper. Even under the Administration's figures this shift of funds produces a "paper" surplus of 1.5 billion dollars for fiscal 1949. But the President is wholly right in refusing to allow this maneuver to color his statement as to the actual relations between the Federal income and outgo for the current year. If he has "scrambled his figures to conceal a surplus," as Senator Bridges charges, his offense is minor in comparison to this congressional distortion of the fiscal picture for political effect.

There is some disagreement as to what the Government is likely to spend during the next year. Senator Bridges thinks that the President has overestimated foreign aid expenditures by possibly a billion dollars and defense expenditures by 100 million dollars. The major difference in appraising the budgetary situation, however, is on the revenue side. President Truman estimates receipts at $40,658,000,000, a sharp drop from last year because of the Tax Reduction Act. Optimistic Mr. Bridges has no hesitation in "upping" this to 44 billion dollars. With more than five sixths of the year ahead of us, neither guess is to be taken too seriously. It is worthy of note, however, that the President himself admits the onward sweep of inflation may increase revenue enough to wipe out the deficit he is now predicting.

Whether next July turns up a small deficit or a small surplus, the President is unquestionably right in saying that Congress should not have reduced governmental income by 3.7 billion dollars in a period of unprecedented employment when the cost of security is mounting rapidly, the world is in a period of acute uncertainty, and our debts from the last war remain enormous. It is not the tricks of bookkeeping or of forecasting that are important, but adherence to a safe and responsible fiscal policy in spite of political pressure for lower taxes.

WHEELING WINGS

In after years
When you have gone your duty-bordered path,
And I, in helpless wrath
Have cursed your stolid heart, prayed lightning strike it;
Have dried these weary tears
And learned to live alone—but not to like it—
Wheeling wings
Against a mottled, gray, unfriendly winter sky
Will bring this moment back. The grief it brings,
Who wants again? Not I!

These restive birds
Careening, whirling, swerving finally in perfect line
Need pass no foolish words
About direction—in their hearts the prophecy of weather;
Sense of North and South; instinct of flesh and feather
Toward some thorny bough, where they will sing;
Where even now, the fine
Green leaves and fragile blossoms lie
Within the shallow womb of bud and branch . . . till spring.
These swift, untroubled creatures know
Where they must go —
But oh, my heart . . . not I!

"Confidential Files"

Speaking as a constant reader who regards The Washington Post's editorial page generally as the most literate and informed in the country, I was pained by the "Confidential Files" item of August 15.

The Washington Post was right the first time, and I suggest it has now accepted Senator Ferguson's (chairman, Senate Investigations Subcommittee) position, which is not even sustained by the double-talk in William P. Rogers' (chief counsel, Senate Investigations Subcommittee) letter of August 15.

It is true that Senator Ferguson's involved rhetoric frequently makes it difficult to decide what he means. But the transcript will show that the loyalty reports on Remington were precisely what he demanded at the hearing.

The Washington Post concludes that "the Senator did not ask for the loyalty file of the employe in question, but only for the employment record." Remington's employment record was supplied to Ferguson in two files, one from Navy Personnel, the other from the Commerce Department. What Senator Ferguson demanded was a second, confidential file on Remington held by Navy Intelligence, and records relative to loyalty investigations which had been removed from the Commerce file at the President's order.

Mr. Rogers' letter stresses that Senator Ferguson wasn't interested in "the names of any informants, sources of information or investigation techniques." Precisely. All he wanted was the stuff on Remington's loyalty which emanated from these sources; he didn't want to try to evaluate the stuff against its origin. I submit that that is even more irresponsible than insisting on seeing the names on informants. (And, of course, the release of what somebody said about some incident would lead inevitably to figuring out who said that to the FBI.)

I suggest, too, that Senator Ferguson naturally wants to sustain an idea that his conduct is scrupulous in contrast to that of the Thomas committee. It is true Senator Ferguson observes more amenities, but I think he manages to do about as much damage to decency. R. P. M.

"Lisner Auditorium"

With reference to your editorial of August 9, "Lisner Auditorium," I should like to urge the formation of a nonpartisan citizens ad hoc committee on legitimate drama in the Nation's Capital. Its one purpose should be to provide, make available, rent, buy or build a theater where the great plays of our American theater could be seen by a democratic type of audience in the American tradition.

This committee should work closely with the American National Theater and Academy, a civic, nonprofit, tax exempt organization which is the national theater of the United States and was chartered by the Congress in 1935 to bring the best of the American theater with the best actors to communities at the lowest prices and work with the schools and communities in doing this. Such a committee should first address itself to the D. C. Recreation Board.

It is ridiculous for our Nation's Capital to have to beg for a theater when many junior and senior high schools in the District have auditoriums suitable for the presentation of major theater. There is no dearth of auditoriums, but what is lacking is a sustained drive by the citizenry to open up existing auditoriums.

Under Article II, Section 3, Public Law 435, Seventy-seventh Congress, occurs the following language: "The board (Recreation Board) shall have power and authority to adopt, conduct, direct or cause to be conducted or directed, under its supervision, a comprehensive program of public recreation which shall include the operation and direction of . . . music, drama, speech, dancing, lectures, forum for informal discussion . . . and other physical, social, mental and creative opportunities, for leisure-time participation as the board shall deem advisable to offer in major recreation centers . . . community centers and social centers in schools . . . or other publicly owned buildings, as well as other recreational facilities which may be agreed upon between the board and the agencies having jurisdiction over such facilities."

The committee I propose should investigate whether, under these broad and inclusive powers conferred upon the board by the Congress it has in the past, or is now, discharging its duties to the community of Washington when it has presented the poorly attended one-act amateur play tournaments which are its major effort in the field of drama.

"Robin Hood's Barn"

I am astounded at the position The Washington Post has taken editorially on the hearings being conducted by the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Your editorial "Robin Hood's Barn" of August 13 is in point.

If "the hearings . . . have uncovered nothing not known and known for a long time . . . to the FBI and the Department of Justice . . ." why hasn't something been done about it? Who is covering up whom and under whose instructions? Did the Department of Justice soft pedal its presentation to the grand jury and create the impression it desired no real action? In my opinion, and I believe I represent the man on the street, we never would have known about these things had it not been for the congressional committees. It is obvious that the numerous witnesses who are standing on their constitutional rights and refusing to answer questions must have something to conceal. Fortunately for them they are not being tried by the Soviets. G. R. SIMCOX.

Third Party Mascot

The July 27 letter signed Nature Lover, suggesting an official animal for the new Wallace party, was so interesting that I am venturing to make still another suggestion.

Its author offered a choice of three possible symbols: a bear, a wolf, or a serpent.

As a pertinent and valid combination of all three and a truly representative symbol of what the Progressive Party stands for, I would like to propose an eagle. It combines the warm heart of the bear, the fascination of the wolf, and the Biblical wisdom of the serpent. In addition the fact that it is the national bird makes it essentially American, and that is what the new party is.

German Food Crisis

In your issue of August 13, you publish a communication from Mr. C. Menteith Gilpin purporting to prove that the food consumption level of the city population of western Germany during the past year reached 3322 calories per person per day, or very nearly the level prevailing in the United States. Of these 3322 calories, it is alleged that 2101 were supplied by deliveries of food produced in the bizonal area.

A conclusion so widely at variance with official United States reports and the observations of visitors to the area requires careful examination.

It is obvious, even to the layman, that there is something seriously wrong with a statistical table which indicates that over half of western Germany's urban food supply consists of milk (14,726,180,000 calories out of a total of 24,975,540,000). On checking Mr. Gilpin's suspicious estimate of milk deliveries (14,726,180 metric tons) against published statistics, I find that total milk production (not deliveries) in all Germany (not in the bizonal area) is about 14 million tons. Production in the bizonal area, to judge from this total and from the relative distribution of cows in Germany, may be estimated at about eight million tons. After making allowance for calf feeding, consumption in farm households, and butter and cheese-making, a much smaller quantity would remain for delivery to market, possibly only four million tons, or less than one third of Mr. Gilpin's figure.

To his erroneous figure of milk deliveries he applies an excessively high caloric value. One ton of milk provides, not one million calories, as he suggests, but 600,000. Another point, tending to overstate still more his calorie total, is that he adopts for wheat the caloric value applicable to wheat flour.

With these corrections, Mr. Gilpin loses more than five sixths of the calories he attributes to the milk deliveries, and his calorie total is halved. The level of consumption obtained by the city population from domestic food then works out at scarcely more than 1000 calories per person per day, instead of Mr. Gilpin's 2101. The total supply from domestic and imported foodstuffs becomes about 2200 calories.

This result would seem to be out of line with the familiar figure of 1550 calories. The latter figure, however, is the caloric value of the rations issued until very recently to the normal consumer, while the figure of 2200 calories represents the average per capita consumption of the entire city population. The difference is explained by the additional rations issued to miners, heavy workers, and other special consumer groups.

Calling Washington

By Marquis Childs

Western Development

Marquis Childs is exploring the great new empire of the West. He is analyzing first-hand the relationship between this vast new development and the rest of the country, and observing just how politics in this election year will fit into the picture. This is the first of a series.

McCALL, IDAHO.—Here in the great empire of the West you get a different view of Washington. It is like looking through the wrong end of a telescope at a lot of little men who seem to be quarreling over issues and ideologies that have no relation to the needs and the problems of the country.

It is on the Pacific Coast and in the mountain States that the greatest possibilities for growth and development still exists. That is reflected in the astonishing population growth shown in the recent Census Bureau report. California and Oregon have both gained more than 40 per cent since 1940, as compared to 5 per cent for New York State and 6 per cent for Pennsylvania.

This growth is reflected to a somewhat lesser degree in the mountain States. The boom is still at the crest here. The demand for almost everything that Idaho produces is at the peak and so are the prices paid to the producer.

THIS IS BEING written in a newly opened resort hotel as fine as anything in the East, with great picture windows in every room that look out across Payette Lakes to the magnificent mountains beyond. It is part of a development that will include one of the longest ski lifts in the world, all of it being built with local capital.

But the big question is whether this is to be merely another boom. And that is where Government comes in.

The balance in the empire of the West must be maintained by Government. It cannot be left entirely to private exploitation. That is recognized even by some of the ablest and most hard-driving exploiters.

It is so because of the delicate balance between land and water in this great empire. A third element is power—cheap water power from the rivers of the West making it possible to compete with the East in spite of all the political advantages the East has arrogated to itself.

The millions who have come out West in the past six or seven years all have jobs in the present boom. A lot of them are finding it mighty hard to get along with sky-high prices. But they are working and they like the new land they have discovered.

But if they are to be kept at work and jobs provided for the other newcomers, then there must be industrial expansion. It is not enough to stand still. Government alone can expand and initiate the great hydro-electric projects that can mean low-cost power and new industry.

Economic prophets who have often been right in the past, such as Marriner Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board, are saying that the inflationary price level is bound to bring a depression. That could mean millions of unemployed, and the burden would be especially heavy in the West with its great new population.

AGAINST THIS background the quarrel between the President and the negative, nullifying Congress has an ominous look. Time is running out. It may, as the gloomy prophets say, be already too late.

That is the short-term consideration. If a depression should come, it would not necessarily be severe or prolonged. So much needs doing and building.

There is another and even more vital role that Government must play in maintaining the balance essential to growth and prosperity in the empire of the West. That is in protecting the watersheds which mean the difference between life and death for this whole region.

The West has for many years been living off its capital, like a heedless rich man who believed his bank account was limitless. Or, to put it more accurately, the East has been dipping into the West's capital.

That capital—in the form of forests, soil, water—has been drained off at a terrifying rate. The Federal Government must apply restraints and effective restraints, if this new growth and this new prosperity is to be sustained.

I have just come from a trip through a part of the wilderness area of the Payette National Forest. On horseback, with a pack train of mules, we traveled over mountain trails through lost, lonely country. Here the life-giving streams flow crystal and pure down to the sea. Here is the capital on which the empire of the West must build and live. Fire, flood and insect pests have seriously threatened the balance. It is a never-ending struggle to maintain it.

I want to try to describe that struggle and what it means for the West and the country. It is at the very root of politics in this year of 1948, even though the Washington sideshow seems intended to disguise that fact.

Herblock is on vacation. His cartoons will be resumed upon his return.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Spy Investigation

THE TESTIMONY before the congressional committee poses the question as to whether Soviet espionage in Washington during the war was as incompetent as it looks. For even if all of Miss Bentley's allegations were true, they would prove that the spy ring to which she belonged never penetrated the top secrets of the Roosevelt-Churchill diplomacy, of the high command, of the intelligence, and of scientific research. Compared for example, with the brilliant achievements of our own espionage against the Germans and the Japanese, or with the Canadian affair, the Bentley spy ring on its own showing got nowhere near the heart and center of the real secrets of the war.

LIPPMANN

If, therefore, this was the main spy ring, we should have to conclude that the Russian intelligence service was remarkably inefficient. But with all their long experience with secret policy and spies and informers, and with all the opportunities open to them in wartime Washington, it is hard to believe that the Russians relied much on what an inexperienced woman like Miss Bentley could turn up for them. It is much more probable that the Bentley ring was one of those feeders of gossip, rumor, clews and fabrications which every intelligence service employs, but with caution—knowing that espionage of this type is not clearly distinguishable from a racket, and that people who make a business of being renegades and informers are quite likely to do just what Miss Bentley says she has done: to betray their foreign employers as they have betrayed their own countrymen.

THE EVIDENCE shows not only that this particular spy ring obtained no secret information of any consequence but that, such as it was, the FBI broke up the ring three years before the congressional committee went into action. This is a pretty good reason for thinking that congressional committees are not equipped to perform the indispensable work of counter-espionage. To expose a spy ring three years after it was dissolved by the regular agencies of the Government is rather slow work, and hardly reassuring that these committees are competent to deal with the problem of espionage. The record suggests that in a serious case involving secrets of state and American security, they would be able to do no more than lock the stable door with a loud bang long after the horse had been stolen.

The fact of the matter is that secrecy is essential to counter-espionage. It is not true as some have been saying lately, that publicity is the best weapon to combat the operation of a foreign secret service. These committees, which use publicity, are extraordinarily unsuited to the task of detecting secret operations while they are in progress. For in order to make a public case they must expose their own sources of information: once that is done, the committees can talk only about what may have happened. They can do nothing about what may be happening or may be going to happen. Thus if the whole Bentley story were true, it would still be nothing but a footnote to what is now ancient history, and the inquiry about what happened in 1943 to 1945 does not add one iota to the security of the United States in 1948. For the espionage which is being carried on today is not being carried on by Miss Bentley and her associates.

IT HAS BEEN argued recently that though the injustice to individuals done in this inquiry is regrettable, the national interest is being served so well that it justifies the sacrifice of a few innocent persons. That argument is profoundly immoral. It is also profoundly unintelligent. For the injustice of the procedure is proof of its incompetence—if the inquiry cannot distinguish clearly the innocent from the guilty, then it is not clearly directed against the guilty.

The safeguards, entirely lacking in these committees, which the law provides for the protection of the innocent are integral to the procedure by which the law convicts and punishes the guilty. For the safeguards are designed to ascertain the truth, and when the safeguards developed in the course of centuries under our law, have disappeared, the truth about the innocent and the truth about the guilty go down together. When innocent men can be lynched, guilty men can go scot free.

THE OTHER DAY in a brilliant anti-Socialist book published in England, sall "Ordeal by Planning" and written by John Jewkes of the University of Manchester, I found a passage from the Times of London, which was written more than 100 years ago. It is worth quoting and pondering:

"The greatest tyranny has the smallest beginnings. From precedents overlooked, from remonstrances despised, from grievances treated with ridicule, from powerless men oppressed with impunity, and overbearing men tolerated with complacence, springs the tyrannical usage which generations of wise and good men may hereafter perceive and lament in vain. At present, common minds no more see a crushing tyrannt in a trivial unfairness or a ludicrous indignity, than the eye uninformed by reason can discern the oak in the acorn, or the utter desolation of winter in the first autumnal fall. Hence the necessity of denouncing with unwearied and even troublesome perseverance a single act of oppression. Let it alone and it stands on record. The country has allowed it and when it is at last provoked to a late indignation it finds itself gagged with the record of its own ill compulsion."

12,000 Jews Held on Cyprus Resentful of British Stand

Tel Aviv, Aug. 12 (Delayed). Marking the second anniversary of the Cyprus detention camp, the British government has permitted 1000 women, children and men over military age to leave for Israel this week. Then the gates of Cyprus will be closed to the remaining 12,000 Jews whom Britain is now holding arbitrarily, without any pretext at legality.

When Britain ended its mandate May 15 its legal right to imprison on Cyprus Jews who had attempted to reach Palestine without certificates ended.

The British Foreign Office had announced on May 11th, "Illegal Jewish immigrants into Palestine at present detained in Cyprus will be freed when Britain lays down the Palestine mandate. Grounds for their detention no longer exist after termination of the mandate."

Because of the war and the danger from Egyptian ship and planes, the Israel government hesitated risking the lives of Cyprus refugees in unarmed vessels. After three weeks ships were ready to sail to Israel.

Truce Halts Departures

Then came word of the truce. The Jews were ready to go when Britain suddenly decided no man of military age could leave even though the truce proposal at Lake Success had thrown out the military age clause.

Count Bernadotte told the British and Israel government Cyprus was their concern, not his. He said further he had no objection to the camps being cleared out completely so long as men of military age were interned in Israel. Britain, however, continued her unilateral action and refused to let the people go until United Nations observers arrive.

They came 10 days before the truce end, and on July 4 the first shipload of refugees left. The Pan York and Pan Crescent took 10,000 persons, mostly women, children, the old, the sick on the overnight journey from Cyprus to Israel.

Despite all efforts of the Israeli government to free the remaining 13,000, Britain refused to release them, saying there were 9000 men of military age she was determined to prevent from joining the Israeli army.

When Britain announced this week she would permit 1000 women, children and compassionate cases to leave for Israel, I flew to the prison island to participate in the immigration movement to see what change had occurred in the prison camps since I visited them last year.

Resentful and Defiant

The people are filled with resentment and defiance. They know that even if they escape from the British barbed-wire camps they still cannot escape from the island itself. The British have searchlights playing on every ship in the harbor. Cyprus waters are as closely guarded as an island fortress in medieval prison history.

The smell of Cyprus has remained—the smell of the tin latrines for 10 or 12 people, the smell of hot cookhouses where people in bathing suits cook meager army rations and sweat pours into the 5-gallon tins which serve as pots and pans, the smell of Nissen huts in which people roast all summer and freeze all winter, the smell of stale and unwashed bodies because of the water shortage. In Caraolos camps hundreds of people line up for hours to get the precious water which flows from the tap from 8 a. m. until 10 a. m.

A few hundred German prisoners of war were brought to Cyprus to build Jewish camps. Children of Xylotymbou can watch the Germans swim, but they cannot swim in the Mediterranean. For a while the British permitte rthem to go down to the beach under military escort.

German prisoners of war were free to go dancing in the night clubs of Famagusta, but Jewish prisoners were shot if they were caught escaping. German prisoners of war were free to take jobs in the towns after the day's work for the British army, but Jews were not allowed even to have small machine tools inside the camp.

Yet the Jews have made a life for themselves inside the barbed wire. They have their own newspapers, art exhibitions, jazz orchestra, small shoe shops, tailor shops and countless barbers.

The spirit of the people today is even more hopeless, bewildered and explosive than last year. So long as ships came, bringing new prisoners, and ships left, taking the monthly quota of 750 to Palestine, there was always something to buoy up the spirit sof the people. But now there was nothing, and the mood was of a desperation close to the breaking point.

I left the island with the first 300 of the 1000 the British had permitted to go. But even when we were on board the S. S. Hatikvah most of the refugees were downhearted because they had left their menfolk behind. Two women in the early 30s said to me, "Can't you tell us when the British will let our husbands come; maybe our husbands will never be able to find us when they are freed."

I asked a man whom I knew from last year what he thought the meaning was of our journey this night.

"The meaning," he said, "is that Jews will go to Israel. It may take some a year, it may take some 5 years or 10 years, but no matter what Britain or the world tries to do to stop us we will get there."

Arabs, Jews Renew Sniping And Gun Duels in Jerusalem

Jerusalem, Aug. 16 (AP).—Arab and Jewish sources reported today a renewal of sniping and gun duels at point-blank range in the Holy City of Jerusalem.

One incident was the fatal shooting of a Jewish liaison officer who was standing within 10 feet of United States Consul Gen. John J. MacDonald. An Israeli army spokesman blamed an Arab sniper for the attack.

The victim, 36-year-old Zeev Hertzog, has been riding in a car with MacDonald as it approached the front lines. MacLonald's predesessor, Thomas C. Wasson, was killed by a sniper.

The Israeli army said that for the first time in nearly three months Arab riflemen sniped at and scored hits on Jewish traffic on the Judean mountain road 2 miles west of Jerusalem. In Haifa, a U. N, spokesman told newsmen Jewish authorities had closed the vital Jerusalem-Tel Aviv highway to convoys.

Jews Attack in Jerusalem

From Amman, in TransJordan, the Arab Legion said Jews had renewed their attacks against Arab frontline positions in both New and Old Jerusalem, with some of the gun battles at less than 15 yards range.

The renewed fighting climaxed a two-day period of the heaviest skirmishes in the four weeks of the second United Nations truce.

The Israeli army said there was fighting on four other fronts in Jerusalem, where "Arab military activity continued steadily the last 24 hours." A heavy barrage of mortars, cannon and machine guns lasted an hour and a half just after dawn oday. The Israeli army said Arabs made three attempts to pierce Jewish lines but were driven back.

Arabs claimed United Nations observers had verified that Jews were responsible for continued truce violations.

Palestine attention also was focused on two other events—the hearing for two British utility officials charged with espionage and conspiracy, and introduction tomorrow of the new American-made Israeli currency. Three other officials of the utility company were freed last week.

Charged on 9 Counts

Frederick Sylvester, an engineer, and William Hawkins, an official, formerly with the Jerusalem Electric Corp., were charged on nine counts with obtaining and broadcasting military information to Arabs. Sylvester was additionally charged with "conspiracy to deposit explosives in Ben Yehuda street calculated to cause death to persons therein."

The bombing in Ben Yehuda street February 22 killed 52 persons.

The new Israeli pound will become legal tender tomorrow. It will be exchanged pound for pound for the present Palestine pound for one month, after which the Palestine pound will be considered foreign currency.

The new currency is backed up to 50 per cent by foreign money, mainly dollars, and the government is negotiating to buy an unspecified amount of gold for additional backing.

Officially, the Israeli pound will be traded for dollars at around $4, but the government will continue the practice of selling the pound for $3.

Progressive Party

By Sumner Welles

The Divided Allegiance

TWO WEEKS AGO I expressed the opinion that we had reason to be gravely concerned because of the support given by well intentioned Americans to the Progressive Party when it was known that "the Communists dictated its platform and control the party machinery."

I have received many protests. One comes from an eminent professor in a leading Eastern university. He says: "As a member of the resolutions committee, I participated in the drafting of the Progressive platform through full and friendly discussion among patriotic and public-spirited citizens. It was 'dictated' by no one."

We need not question the sincerity of the belief of this professor that the platform which he helped to draft was freely adopted after "full and friendly discussion among patriotic and public-spirited citizens." But we certainly have cause to ask whether our democratic institutions are functioning properly when a noted teacher of American youth is so influenced by his ideological bias that he cannot recognize facts.

REPORTS OF the platform discussions were published in full. The records of the individuals who dominated the proceedings are well known. The party line was followed from beginning to end. Every proposal that implied that Russia shares in the responsibility for the present crisis was quashed. No guaranties were asked of the Soviet government. But it was demanded that the United States abandon the atom bomb, withdraw its forces of occupation, and stop the draft. There could be no clearer proof that the proceedings responded to Communist directives than the platform that the Communist Party itself adopted a few days later. The Progressive Party was created as the vanguard of a "united front." It serves the same ends as the Nenni Socialists in Italy.

The danger lies in the fact that the honest conviction of some Americans, including many teaching in our schools and universities, that the Soviet economic system is preferable to the boom-and-bust system of western capitalism, has developed into a psychosis. They have come to believe that the Soviet government is justified in all of its objectives and in all of its methods.

They call for "a strengthened United Nations." Yet they refuse to admit that the Soviet Union has all but destroyed it. They talk of "non-intervention" and of "the right of peoples to choose their own form of government," although they refuse to concede that the Soviet Union is actively intervening in every other independent country and has imposed minority dictatorships on the peoples of eastern Europe. They profess to uphold "political liberty" and "democracy," but they refuse to see that Soviet communism destroys liberty and is the negation of democracy.

Those who, like myself, believe that intellectual liberty is one of the greatest blessings bestowed upon us by the American Constitution will uphold the right of every American teacher to that liberty even if he supports an ideology which would obliterate his own freedom. But surely the enjoyment of that right should not be permitted to impair the equal right of every young American to learn of our political and social institutions from those who believe in them, and to be taught what freedom means by those who appreciate the value of freedom.

THREE YEARS ago many of us hoped that the Soviet Union would find it to its own interest to cooperate through the United Nations in establishing a world order under which both democracy and communism might exist without a clash. The contrary has proved to be the case. The Soviet Union has denounced as enemies all who are not Communists. The Kremlin is pursuing a policy of imperialism far more militant than that of the Czars. It is for these reasons that the Soviet Union has lost the friendly respect in which it was held by the masses in the democracies during the war. Unless the American people are willing to abandon all thought of that free and peaceful world for which they fought, they are compelled to stand firmly behind a policy of containment.

Secretary Marshall stated the issue accurately in the words he addressed to the Foreign Affairs Committee last May: "A fundamental task of the United Nations and of our foreign policy is to dispel the misconceptions of the Soviet leaders, and to bring about a more realistic view of what is possible and what is impossible in the relationship of the Soviet Union and the world at large."

The contest faced by the free peoples of the West is not of their own making. It is a contest that has been deliberately forced upon them by the Soviet dictatorship.

These August weeks of 1948 are strangely reminiscent of those ominous weeks of another August, nine years ago. Surely the democratic peoples must have learned from their experience during that tragic era. In dealing with a ruthless and aggressive autocracy there is nothing to be gained by compromising on essentials when survival is at stake. Those who tell us that we will be safe if we will only admit that the Soviet Union is always right, and who insist that the way to get peace is to bring our occupation forces home, abandon the bomb and abolish the draft, are quite as much the indirect accomplices of the Kremlin as the French collaborationists of 1939 were the indirect accomplices of Hitler.

For the American who wants peace, freedom and security, the time has long since passed when a divided allegiance is conceivable.

Cows' Pituitary Gland Tissue Used to Make Japs Taller

Tokyo, Aug. 16 (AP).—Japanese medical scientists have started, with apparent early success, to make short people taller by grafting pituitary gland tissue from cows to the thighs of the patients.

Experiments on 45 patients averaging about 20 years old, the researchers reported today, showed they had grown two-fifths to four-fifths of an inch in one month. The operations were performed at Kyushu University Hospital. Six of the operations were reported failures.

In one spectacular case a man grew nearly 3 inches in four months, the scientists said, and his mental activity increased. Before the operation he was said to have been able to write only elementary Japanese phonetics. Now, they reported, he can write junior phonetics with ease.

That substances from the pituitary gland can control growth, particularly in the young, has been established by Dr. Herbert M. Evans, famed University of California biologist, and his research associate, Dr. C. H. Li.

They have caused rats to grow phenomenally by giving them a purified extract of animal pituitaries. They also can stop growth with another pituitary extract.

It taqkes hundreds of animal glands to get even the tinfest amount of purified extract. Not enough has been produced as yet to experiment on growth control in humans. The high price and scarcity of glands is the main drawback.

ders, and Ruth's sister, Mrs. Wilbur Moberly of Baltimore, Md.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter de Rose; the Babe's lawyer, Melvin Lowenstein, and two close friends, J. Paul Carey, treasurer of the Babe Ruth Foundation for Underpriyileged Children, and James Chapman, a publicity man for the Ford Motor Company, also were with him when he died.

The Babe failed rapidly following the partial coma into which he sank shortly before 6:25 p. m.

Dr. Hayes E. Martin remained at his bedside but was unable to help.

When word that Ruth was "sinking" was flashed, the skyscraper hospital on Manhattan's East Side was flooded with reporters and photographers.

The street urchins gathered outside the hospital door.

Father Kaufman descended the hospital steps after Ruth's death and immediately was besieged by the youngsters who had been waiting patiently for several hours. Asked for Ruth's last words, Father Kaufman said:

"The Babe said his prayers to the very end."

Then Father Kaufman added:

"He's been prepared for this a long time. He said his prayers religiously and then fell asleep shortly before he died.

"Early in the day the Babe thanked me.

"I had been here this morning and then left. They called me back at 6:15.

"He was a very fine man," Father Kaufman said. "He received all the last rites and he died a good Catholic."

One of the children who had sat on the steps for several hours, blond John Kriban, 12, mumbled, "I had hoped all the time he'd get better. I prayed for him right along."

When the announcement came, such a crowd had gathered in front of the hospital that police were called out to move them on. Hospital authorities were afraid other patients, seriously ill, might be disturbed.

Less than an hour after Ruth's death, the Yankees, back in the Polo Grounds, the park where Ruth first attained home-run fame, played the Giants in an exhibition game.

A shocked silence was the only response to the announcement that the Babe had died. Before the game the fans stood in a moment of silent prayer.

In Boston, shortly before the Brooklyn Dodgers played the Boston Braves in a National League game, the fans also stood in silent prayer. Ruth wound up his playing career with the Braves and dropped out of organized baseball after a short stretch as a Brooklyn coach.

Babe Rescued Baseball

By The Associated Press

Babe Ruth rescued baseball when it was tottering in the wind of public disfavor under the impact of the 1919 "Black Sox" scandal and with his mighty bat he went on to change the entire complexion of the national pastime. Baseball, in turn, brought him rich dividends in fame and fortune.

The big, lovable, happy-go-lucky Bambino was more than a star. He was a symbol. Baseball players might come and baseball players might go, but regardless of their achievements none ever could supplant him in the public mind as the personification of everything that was great and spectacular in the game.

He had an indefinable something called color. Other players might be huge, others some day might even hit more home runs during a season. But the Sultan of Swat had that inborn instinct to make every act and every move exciting.

Wherever he went, crowds surrounded him. He was the idol of the kids, the greatest of all in the hearts of the fans. The "stomach-ache" that kept him out of the lineup for about 50 games in 1925 became almost a national calamity.

To Ruth more than any other man went the credit for revolutionizing the game and introducing the modern era of baseball. With the home run, he brought millions of fans through the turnstiles.

The Yankee Stadium, massive baseball plant that his bat helped to make possible while he was rightfielder for the New York American League team, was known as "The House That Ruth Built." Ruth also was directly responsible for a tremendous increase in the players' salary scale.

He turned baseball from a pitchers' stronghold to a batters' paradise. The ball was changed to put more "rabbit" in it. The squeeze, bunt and steal system gave way to free swinging and big innings. The fans cheered the heavy hitting and particularly the Ruthian long-distance dynamiting.

It was back in 1920, baseball's darkest hour, that "The King of Swat" started his amazing domination of the game, although he had been in the big leagues as a left-handed pitcher, for six years before that. Baseball was rocked by the "Black Sox" scandal, in which six members of the Chicago White Sox "sold out" the 1919 World Series. Ray Chapman, Cleveland shortstop, had just been killed by a pitched ball. Confidence in the game was shattered.

Then, along came Ruth, a big-bodied, spindly legged athlete, with a never-equalled ability to hit a ball. He hit the then unbelievable total of 54 home runs in 1920 to give the fans other headlines to read than those of the "Black Sox" and Chapman.

Before his major league career ended in 1935, the "Bambino," despite vision which was none too good, had compiled the astonishing totals of 714 home runs, 60 in one year, had batted in 2219 runs and had held, in all, 76 major league all-time records—so many in fact, that the statisticians gave him an entire section to himself in the record books.

Whopping Salaries

His $80,000 annual salary for 1930 and '31 never had been equaled. Altogether, in 22 seasons, he received total salaries of $896,000, plus $41,445.11 as his share of 10 World Series with the Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees, and an uncomputable amount for writings and endorsements. Through advisors he invested so well he realized a $2500 monthly income by the time he was 45.

Ruth was born George Herman Ruth, jr., on February 6, 1895, one of five children of a Baltimore saloonkeeper. For many years he thought the birth date was February 7, 1894, and continued to observe February 7 and to add a year to his age even after he learned his birth certificate gave the later birth date. His error came to light in 1934 when he applied for a passport to travel in the Orient and the passport bureau required a birth certificate.

Ruth's mother, whose maiden name was Schanber, lived until he was 13. His father lived until the Babe's second year in the majors.

In 1902, when Ruth was 7 years old, his parents placed him in St. Mary's Industrial School in Baltimore, a training school run by a group of Catholic Brothers. He remained there, off and on, until 1914. He was trained to be a tailor and shirt maker.

Here he came under the kindly influence of Brother Matthias, the principal. Ruth never forgot Brother Matthias' help and always credited him for getting put on the right path.

"Folks have called the place an orphan home," Ruth used to explain, "but it was really a reform school. Only, the boys weren't put there for punishment—just for training."

Brother Gilbert's Help

He became a leader among the boys and one of the school's faculty, Brother Gilbert, encouraged and coached him in baseball. Characteristically, Ruth was wild, headstrong and rough, traits he never lost. He was untamed, and, to the end, long after he left baseball and turned to golf for amusement, he had an undying will to win.

Through Brother Gilbert, Jack Dunn, manager of the immortal Baltimore Orioles, signed Ruth to a contract at $600 a year. He turned up with the Orioles the next spring, a long-legged 6-foot-2-inch 200-pounder with a flat broad nose, large ears and limitless stamina. There was no sign then that the size of his waistline and the condition of his "tummy" were to become matters of national importance.

The same year, Dunn sold him to the Red Sox for a sum estimated at between $2900 and $10,000. After brief seasoning at Providence, he came back to the Red Sox.

At Boston, Ruth chafed at being a pitcher, which prevented his playing every day. He liked to perform in the outfield and occasionally took a somewhat awkward turn at first base.

The Sox won the American League pennant in 1915 with Ruth's pitching help. They repeated again in 1916, and in the World Series of that year Ruth started his astonishing pitching record of hurling 29 consecutive series innings without allowing a run. This record began with a string of 13 innings in one overtime game of that series and was carried over to 1918 when next the Sox reached the postseason play.

In 1919, his big bat boomed for 29 home runs, a then major league record. That year the manager of the Red Sox was a genial baseball-minded man, Ed Barrow. He and Owner Harry Frazee sold Ruth to the New York Yankees for a record price of $100,000 in cash and $35,-

Death Ends Act in 'Drama Of Drugs'

N. Y. Herald Tribune News Service

NEW YORK.—Babe Ruth's death from cancer brought to light the fact that the great baseball star played a dramatic role, in his declining days, in one of the most exciting medical investigations of the generation.

Doctors tried to save Mr. Ruth's life with a drug, teropterin. The former Yankee slugger was one of the first human patients to be given teropterin by injection, and in the early months of treatment last year, the drug produced what doctors described as a "remarkable" improvement in Mr. Ruth's condition, although it did not seem to be so effective in other cases.

There was great excitement in the medical profession at the time and doctors throughout the Nation came to know of Mr. Ruth as medical science's best example of teropterin therapy in cancer. His improvement gave the medical profession the world over hope that cancer could be combated successfully by the simple administration of a drug.

Mr. Ruth remained in a stable condition for several months but hopes which had arisen with his improvement later faded, and the drug, it developed, was not able to save his life.

In Mr. Ruth's case, in the final battle between the drug and cancer, cancer won, and this has been true in the case of all drugs used in human beings to fight this disease.

Death of Babe Ruth Follows Long Battle With Disease

000 worth of ball players. The Barrow followed the Babe to the Yanks, becoming business manager under Col. Jacob Ruppert, and, after the brewer-owner's death, president of the club.

At New York, Ruth switched to the outfield, and during 1920, with the so-called lively "rabbit ball" in use, he just about changed the game with his sensational hitting. In 1921 he clubbed 59 home runs, starting the trend which put a premium on long-distance hitting. For that batting spree he was rewarded with a $52,000 salary for 1922.

The next season, however, his hitting fell off, yet, just when baseball writers decided Ruth was the "busted phenomenon," back he came in 1923 with a .303 batting average during the regular season, and three home runs in a record-smashing rampage during the World Series. He was named the American League's most valuable player that season.

A Jinx Season

The year 1925 turned out to be the Ruthian "jinx" season. Topping off family difficulties and a severe case of influenza was Ruth's famous stomach ache. He collapsed en route home from spring training and was weeks in a hospital from the combined effects of indigestion and influenza. Climaxing this, when he returned to action he staged a row with Manager Miller Huggins for which he was fined $5000 for "misconduct off the playing field"—stiffest penalty ever pinned on a player. He vowed he would never again play for Huggins, but he cooled off finally, realized his mistake and admitted it. That action marked his transition from an overgrown boy to manhood.

Again he was the "busted phenomenon," and again he came back. In 1926, at 32, he batted .372, hit 47 home runs and paced one of the greatest teams in baseball history into the first of three straight pennants. The next year he turned in the greatest slugging record of all-time, with 60 home runs in the regular season, and he hit 54 more in 1928.

As in 1925, so in 1929, Ruth ran into tough luck most of the year. His first wife, the former Helen Woodford from whom he was separated, burned to death, and it was during that season that his long talked-of heart ailment was mentioned for the first time. His physician told him it was "muscular heart trouble." Later in 1929 Ruth married Mrs. Claire Hodgson, a widow.

The Yankees lost the American League championship in 1929 to the Philadelphia Athletics, and didn't regain the title until 1932. In the World Series that year, probably the most amazing of the Babe's diamond accomplishments occurred. By the third game he was thoroughly disgusted with the taunts hurled at him by the Chicago Cubs. He stepped to the plate to bat and warned Pitcher Charley Root that the first good toss would be walloped into the right-center stands. Every fan in the crowd of 49,986 saw him dramatically point to the distant bleachers, "calling his shot." And he did just what he threatened, blasting a home run just about to the spot at which he had pointed. The partisan crowd stood and cheered.

Machine Runs Down

In 1933 the great baseball machine that was Ruth began to show signs of running down. His salary was cut to $52,000, his home run production fell off to 34, and the following season, 1934, was his last full campaign with the Yankees.

During that stage of his career, Ruth had entertained ambitions to manage a major league club. He was offered the managership of the Yankees' No. 1 farm team, the Newark, N. J. Bears of the International League, but refused, insisting he would not go back to the minor leagues in any capacity. As result, early in 1935 when the Boston Bees made him an attractive offer as player and club executive, he accepted after obtaining his release from the Yankees.

His stay with the Bees was brief, however, and on June 3, at 40 years of age, he was given his unconditional release after a break with Manager Bill McKechnie and Club President Emil Fuchs. He returned to baseball only once afterward, as coach of the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1938, at a $15,000 salary.

Tried for Newark Post

Ruth might have realized his desire to manage the Yankees if he had accepted Ruppert's offer of the Newark job in 1934; "it's a major league job or nothing," he said then. But a little more than a decade later Ruth disclosed that he had tried several times to get the job as manager of the Yankees' Newark farm club, but that Larry MacPhail had turned him down. He apparently had many lonely moments after his retirement from baseball.

Away from baseball, Ruth turned to his second love, golf, and became a better than average linksman, often shooting in the 70's.

Edward G. Barrow, the man who converted Ruth from pitcher to outfielder and thereby started him on his amazing career, once said of him:

"There never has been anybody like Ruth and there never will be—and not only for his home run feats either. The Babe was a wonderful, natural, versatile ball player. He could do everything on the diamond and do it well. He had what is called baseball brains. He never made a mistake on the ball field. He knew instinctively just what to do."

Only One Babe

There was only one Babe Ruth. Training rules meant little to him. In his heyday he used to average a dozen "hot dogs" every day during the baseball season. He also was a heavy cigar smoker and tobacco chewer. There were annual salary disputes with Ruppert amid much ballyhoo.

Ruth underwent a delicate neck operation early in 1947 and for some months afterward was in a serious condition. On his birthday that year he greeted anxious sports fans from a sickbed with the encouraging words, "I'm fighting hard and I'll soon be on top."

Soon after the 1947 baseball season opened, Ruth returned to Yankee Stadium for a special day in his honor. It was Babe Ruth Day not only there, but wherever baseball was played—in parts of Latin America and in Japan as well as the United States. The stadium ceremonies were broadcast and tuned in at various parks throughout the land.

Still thin and weak after an 82-day ordeal in the hospital, the baseball immortal on that occasion gave a message to the "kids of America" who always were among his most faithful followers.

Babe Said "Thanks"

"The only real game in the world is baseball," he said into the microphone. The huge crowd kept silent and listened to the hoarse whisper of the once mighty Bambino. "In this game you have to come up from youth," he continued in his raspy voice. "You've got to start way down at the bottom, if you're going to be successful like those fellows over there." He pointed to the Yankee players.

Ruth wore the familiar long tan camel's hair coat and tan cap over his graying, baldish head as he walked slowly from the Yankee dugout in the shadows of the cavernous "House That Ruth Built" to respond to the praises heaped on him by various speakers.

Closing his brief, extemporaneous speech, he said: "There's been so many lovely things said about me, I'm glad I had the opportunity to thank everybody. Thank you." The 58,339 fans roared their applause.

Babe Ruth could have lived to be 150 and tottered into Yankee Stadium or down a street in any city or hamlet in the country on age-tortured legs and there would have been a grand welcome for him. Picturesque in his misshapen bulk and vast expanse of swarthy countenance, he was utterly unforgettable.

Nippon Vs. Bambino

The Bambino was so well known in Japan, where he barnstormed, that Japanese marines in World War II used his name as a battle cry on one occasion—apparently the only American name they knew—as they charged United States Marine lines on New Britain. "To hell with Babe Ruth," they cried.

But the charge was scored as an error—30 of the Japanese were struck out for good.

Ruth, commenting on the incident, said: "I hope every Jap that mentions my name gets shot—and to hell with all Japs anyway."

A Doodle that became famous

Some important things "just happen!"

For example, long ago a Southern Railway man had a free moment, a pencil, and a piece of paper.

His wandering pencil developed our symbol, "The Southern Serves the South."

To Southerners it's the sign of an efficient, economical transportation system . . . whose 8,000 miles of lines are the sinews and muscles of our fast-growing Southland.

To our 45,000 employees it's the sign of a good place to work . . . where a man can take pride in the job he's doing.

To Southern businessmen it's the sign of a steady customer with a giant shopping list . . . who buys often.

To communities all over the South it's the sign of a friendly railway . . . a neighbor, a taxpayer and a "good citizen."

From its casual birth on a scrap of paper, this "doodle" has grown to mean many things to many people . . . all across America.

No Man in Sports Captivated Public Like Babe Ruth

BABE RUTH WILL BE LAID to rest this week and the sorrow leaps the bounds of baseball as his fame leaped the seas. His was the pretty American story of the boy who came out of the shelter of St. Mary's Industrial School to hit a baseball farther than anybody else, win wages greater than that of the President of the United States, and live to be a symbol of prowess on the field, warmth off it.

POVICH

No man in sports quite captivated the American people like the Babe whose massive bulk and classic swing gave them the thrill of his nonesuch home runs. And indeed it perhaps can be said of Ruth that he evoked the first friendly boos in history—mere goading taunts until he could delight the same fans with one of his mighty blasts.

They wanted their hero to swashbuckle, and he did that with his Casey at the Bat contempt for pitcher, and they could be tolerant of his run-ins with constituted authority. And they wanted him to be a nice guy, and he was that, with his wonderful "Hi, Kid" salutation to everybody and his uninhibited fondness for children that ran through the Babe Ruth story like a clear creek emptying out of turbulent waters.

IN BASEBALL'S HOUR of need, the transcendant figure of Ruth resuscitated the game that was gasping in 1920 from the lack of the life-giving public confidence which had been horribly punctured by the Black Sox scandal that broke that year. Late in the season the tawdry story of the thrown World Series of 1919 left the Nation aghast and it was ready to class baseball as a game for the fixers, and baseball's investments were threatened with collapse.

That's when Ruth caught up the game's dying torch with his sensational display of home-run hitting that already had carried him past his former record of 29 homers in a season. His total moved to 40, and then 50, and there had never been anything like it as Ruthian wallops went sailing out of parks and the peepul found in the thrill of Babe's homers the antidote for the shock of the Black Sox chicanery. Fifty-four homers Ruth posted that season.

And almost before the Nation could reflect again the next season on the shoddy business of that World Series scandal, Ruth was off again with an even more amazing barrage of home runs. In 1921 he achieved the incredible total of 59 homers and succored baseball from its staggers. The Ruth story was superimposed on the 1919 World Series story and a grateful public turned back to baseball.

THE IMPACT OF RUTH'S home-run display had other effects on the game. It changed baseball from the hit-and-run, steal-and-bunt science to a game with emphasis on batting power. Extra-base hitting was the new rage. By 1922, Ruth was a $50,000-a-year-man, and both players and managers could understand the efficacy of the home run. Stealing didn't become simply a lost art. Ruth's kind of hitting merely obscured it.

It was to Ruth's credit that his big salaries never stirred jealousy among his colleagues. Teammates and opponents regarded him as a man apart, and acknowledged that his success, the crowds he drew, raised their own salary standards. And there were no honest pretensions by anybody of being another Ruth. Hack Wilson hit 56 home runs to approach the Babe's final record of 60, and Hank Greenberg, Lou Gehrig and Jimmy Foxx neared that figure, but none of them threatened to match Ruth's appeal.

Of Ruth it has been said that he was more interesting, more colorful striking out than other guys were hitting home runs. And he wasn't just a big guy who could swing a bat. Before he turned to outfielding he was the American League's best left-handed pitcher with the Boston Red Sox, and he matched Christy Mathewson's record of pitching 29 consecutive scoreless innings for world series play.

And there never was any doubt that he would have been a great first baseman.

THE LATE WALTER JOHNSON, never given to deprecating the skill of anybody, once made the most expressive description of Babe Ruth as a home-run hitter. Johnson was asked how he rated Ruth's ability to drive a ball against the long hitting of such as Gehrig and Foxx and Greenberg, and the Washington pitching idol replied: "I can tell you this much. Ruth's home runs out of the park get smaller quicker than anybody else's."

And we have the word of Joe Judge, the Washington first baseman, that the Babe, with a bat in his hand and his known ability to pull a ball into right field, was a fearsome thing for a first baseman, playing close in, to behold. "Out there with my first baseman's mitt, I'd see Ruth ready to swing and I always had the impression he was not only looking down my throat but the throats of my wife and boy as well."

And the impression I have as they prepare to lay the Babe to rest is that they never could have called that third strike against him if he'd had a bat in his hand. And another thing to suggest itself is that his last brath was probably a long one.

Babe's First Homer Goes 'Country Mile'

(The following story was written for the Associated Press by Jesse Linthicum, veteran sports editor of the Baltimore Sun, who covered the Baltimore Orioles when Babe Ruth made his first trip South as a member of the training camp squad of a professional baseball team.)

By Jesse A. Linthicum

Baltimore, Aug. 16 (AP).—I saw George Ruth hit his first home run, pitch his first game, and obtain the nickname of Babe.

Various baseball leaders have been credited with having taught the star of stars how to play baseball, but the truth is that he was a great natural and played by instinct.

Even as a kid he could play every position on the diamond and play them well.

How Babe Broke In

Ruth broke into baseball in a most unusual manner. Back in the days before World War I the power in local college baseball circles was Mount St. Joseph's College out on the Frederick road. Brother Gilbert, who was one of the best baseball coaches of the day, turned out fine athletes. Scouts made frequent visits to the campus in the spring.

Jack Dunn owned and managed the Baltimore Orioles back in 1914, and he liked his players big and strong. His attention had been called during the winter of 1913-14 to a young left-hander on Brother Gilbert's team named Ford Meadows.

Meadows was a strikeout king, and the ace of Brother Gilbert's staff. Brother Gilbert wanted to keep him on the college's rolls for two reasons. He wanted him to complete his education, and he needed his services in his athletic setup.

When Dunn called at the school Brother Gilbert had an immediate answer when Meadows' name was mentioned.

Greatest Young Star

"Jack, leave Meadows in school and I'll direct you to one of the greatest young stars I ever have seen," he said. "This boy is powerful, can pitch, throw and run."

Dunn valued the judgment of his good friend.

Arrangements were made for George to go to Fayetteville, N. C., the Oriole training camp, before Dunn had seen the youngster in a uniform.

When the players were in camp about a week Dunn arranged his first "yanigan" game.

Lands in a Corn Field

It was in this game that Ruth made his first homer, a prodigious clout that sent the North Carolina natives down to Main street talking to themselves.

They never had seen such a long hit, and neither had I. The ball park was built within the county fair grounds. There was a half mile track, and the baseball field was built within the oval. The ball Ruth hit cleared the track in right field and landed in an adjoining corn field.

It stuck where it hit, and Bill Morrisette, who played right field for the opposing nine, reached the ball as Ruth stepped on home plate.

That was a signal for Dunn to become enthusiastic. Walking back to the hotel that afternoon, Dunn put an arm around Ruth's big shoulders and remarked:

"This baby will not get away from me."

Then and there Ruth acquired the nickname of Babe.

Haight Recalls:

Babe Once Came Through For D. C. Kids

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

IF YOU WERE sitting in the grandstand at Sportsman's Park, St. Louis, about half way between first and home, early in the afternoon of October 6, 1926, you could have seen two dozen boys seated near a fat sportswriter who works for The Washington Post and the conversation would have gone something like this:

"Aw come on, Mr. Haight. Let us do it. We all know we're a cinch to win it."

"But you fellows are taking a big chance," I replied.

"All right; we know that."

"O.K., I'll do as you say, but remember my terms."

And so I bet $50 that Babe Ruth would hit a home run that afternoon. The money represented their dinner check and if they lost—well, nothing to eat until breakfast.

I guess this situation needs more explanation—so here goes:

The boys were members of a sandlot baseball team that had won a circulation contest conducted by The Washington Post with the winner getting an all-expense trip to the entire 1926 World Series—Cardinals vs. Yankees. I was along to act as ballast.

THE SERIES opened in New York and the clubs split two games before moving to St. Louis. Ruth hadn't hit a homer up to this point and the first day in the West he fanned twice and again failed to connect.

My boys, ardent Yankee rooters, were pulling for Ruth and resented the booing that greeted big Babe. The most persistent hecklers were in a crowd of men in the row in back of us. My boys were fighting mad when the last out came and Ruth hadn't delivered.

Before the second St. Louis game, with the Cardinals leading the series, two games to one, the boys insisted I make the men behind us put up or shut up.

I had completed arrangements for the bet and our gang concentrated on some honest-to-goodness rooting. When Babe tiptoed to the plate, my crew let out a yell that at least put a dent in the booing. Babe took a pitch for a ball and then watched one cut the plate for a strike. He fouled off the next one and then

Di Mag Says:

'I Felt Like A Rube When I Met Ruth'

New York, Aug. 16.—Joe DiMaggio, who succeeded Ruth as home run king of the Yankees, tonight recalled one of the bitterest experiences he ever had as a youngster—he was denied permission by his parents to see Ruth play in an exhibition game at San Francisco.

"I couldn't go because mother said it cost a little too much money. We just didn't have enough for luxuries like that. But it was a terrific disappointment."

DiMaggio said one of his greatest thrills came when Ruth came into the Yankee clubhouse to meet him after he had been with the club about two years.

"I felt just like a rube when Ruth shook my hand," he said.

'He Was Great Man, Player,' Says Griff

"That's too bad, too bad," said Nat President Clark Griffith last night when informed of Babe Ruth's death.

"The poor fellow just couldn't make it. It's a shame. He was a great man and a great player."

Truman to Send His Condolence

President Truman advised of the death of Babe Ruth, arranged tonight to send a message of condolence to Mrs. Ruth.

Charles G. Ross, White House press secretary, said the President had been informed of the baseball star's death not long after it occurred. The President's message to Mrs. Ruth will not be made public here.

The White House has called the hospital in New York last week, at Mr. Truman's request, to inquire how Ruth was getting along.

Rude Awakening for Boys at St. Mary's

Baltimore, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—The boys at St. Mary's Industrial School went to bed tonight unaware that Babe Ruth, a graduate of the institution and one of its greatest benefactors, has died.

"Lights-out" sounded at the school before word of Ruth's death was received. The Catholic brothers said the youths, ranging in age from 10 to 16, would be told at mass tomorrow morning.

Ruth spent more than 7 years at the institution and it was there that his baseball genius first was recognized. The late brother Gilbert took young Ruth in hand and was instrumental in getting him his first job in organized ball.

Ruth Is Seventh Of 1927 Yanks to Go

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—The death of Babe Ruth today marked the passing of the seventh member of the famous 1927 New York Yankees.

Other members of the greatest Yankee machine of all time and perhaps the greatest team in baseball, who have died are Lou Gehrig, Herb Pennock, Tony Lazzeri, Urban Shocker, John Grabowski and Manager Miller Huggins.

Ruth's Death Loss To America—Barrow

From Press Dispatches

From all over the land last night came tribute for Babe Ruth from those who knew him best—players, managers and baseball people.

Edward G. Barrow, former president of the Yankees, the man who converted Ruth from a pitcher to an outfielder, almost collapsed at his home in Larchmont, N. Y. when informed the great player had died.

"Oh my God," he said. "I just can't believe it, I am terribly shocked and terribly sorry. He was certain, the greatest player of them all. This is a tremendous personal loss to me and an even greater loss to all America."

Barrow's last reunion with Ruth was on June 13 at Yankee Stadium when all of the players on the 1923 world championship Yankee team had a silver anniversary reunion. As they met on the diamond, both broke into tears and they embraced.

Barrow, now past 80, had many differences with Ruth, mostly over the slugger's fabulous salary and his nonchalance of training rules. But beneath the bickering both admitted to a deep personal friendship.

CONNIE MACK, veteran manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, said:

"We know he was the greatest home-run hitter the country has ever seen.

"What he has done for the youth of America could not be done by any other man. The youth of our country thought more of him than of any man living."

WILL HARRIDGE, president of the American League:

"Babe Ruth was the greatest single figure and personality in the history of baseball," Harridge said.

"The indomitable spirit and courage he displayed so many years on the playing field, and which he showed through his long illness, stand as part of a glorious Ruth legend that will live on always in the annals of our national sport and be an inspiration to youth forever."

FORD FRICK, president of the National League: "Babe Ruth needed every inch of that big chest of his to protect the world's largest heart. I knew the Babe well. I traveled with the Yankees as a baseball writer, and I never saw a man with more heart—and you can interpret that as meaning both courage on the field and consideration for others."

COMMISSIONER A. B. CHANDLER first heard of Babe Ruth's death from a reporter who boarded a train at Huntington, W. Va., last night.

"I'm deeply shocked, deeply shocked," Chandler said slowly. "His death will be a deep distress. He was one of my personal friends.

Words of Sorrow

Man on Street Is Hit Hard By the News

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

NEWS OF BABE RUTH'S death last night came as no surprise to Washington's man-on-the-street.

Baseball fans, and non-baseball fans alike had followed reports of the Babe's fight against death.

They expressed themselves in different ways, but their sentiments were all of sorrow.

Mrs. Joseph Ridgely of Upper Marlboro, Md., a Nats' rooter, said, "I saw him many times. In my book, he's still the King of Swat."

Conflicting headlines confused Mrs. Alice Keating of Cleveland as she walked out of the Warner Theater, which is currently featuring "The Babe Ruth Story."

"OH MY, POOR BABE is dead," she said when she saw a newspaper which announced that Babe Ruth had "struck out." Then her eyes shifted to an earlier edition which still had the Babe "sinking."

"Oh, then maybe he didn't die," she said. "Thank God."

Her comment when finally told that the Bambino had actually passed away was "poor fellow." She said she had not been a baseball fan before but that the story of Ruth might make her one.

Miss Helen Evans of 11 Gallatin st. ne. walked out of the Warner, her eyes already red. When she saw the headline, she sobbed, pulled out a handkerchief, and dabbed at her eyes. "It's a great loss to all kids," she said.

Fred O. McMillan, manager of the theater, had planned to announce the news to the audience at the 9:15 p. m. break between

Demaret's 68 Tops Greiner In Playoff

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 16 (AP).—Experience and ability to play under pressure paid off today for Jimmy Demaret, who took first money of $2,450 from Otto Greiner, Baltimore, in the play-off of the St. Paul Open Golf Tournament.

Demaret shot a 4-under-par 66 while Greiner was carding his poorest round of the tourney for a 70. They finished the scheduled 72 holes of the open tied at 273 yesterday, forcing them into the 18-hole play-off.

The Baltimore pro, trying hard in his first chance to capture a big tourney, just couldn't get his putter working. Time after time his ball would just stop an inch or so short of the cup or hang on the lip.

They went into the last three holes with Demaret ahead by four strokes, but two three-putt greens, on the sixteenth and seventeenth holes, whittled that advantage to two strokes. They finished with eighteenth-hole birdie fours.

Each of the players contributed a spectacular shot. Demaret narrowly missed making a hole in one on the fifteenth, a 225-yard affair. His drive hit the green and lipped the cup as it rolled by to rest about three feet past. He putted back for a birdie deuce as Greiner took a par three.

3 Johnson Games Today

The cream of the Walter Johnson School League's 98 teams begins a last-ditch fight this morning for the right to play in the championship series Thursday on the Ellipse and Friday at Griffith Stadium.

Three games are on today's preliminary playoff agenda, two in the 12-and-under division, and the other game in the 13-14 age group. The preliminaries continue Wednesday morning.

The championship round will be conducted on a two-out-of-three basis, with necessary third games taking place Saturday on the Ellipse or at the ball park.

Two championship teams will be crowned in each age division. Four teams have already qualified for the title round. Eleven other teams are still in the running for the other four championship round berths.

The four teams which have already qualified are:

12-and-under—Thomas Parkside, American Association champion, and Cook, International League titlist.

13-14—Bundy Tigers, American League flag winners, and Kelly Miller, National League pennant winners.

Prexy Asks 'Fair Play' For Star

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of Maryland University, yesterday said he would wage an all-out fight to preserve the eligibility of Lu Gambino, Maryland's star halfback, for next season.

Dr. Byrd admitted that Gambino technically is ineligible to play this fall under strict interpretation of Southern Conference rules, but he said he would ask conference members to permit Gambino to play on a basis of "fairness and sportsmanship."

"If the conference turns us down," the one-time football coach turned college president said, "we shall naturally abide by its decision. But, we shall also ask to examine the records of every football player in the conference."

Crux of Situation

(Couper said yesterday that the only athletes entitled to four years of varsity competition in the Southern Conference were those who entered school either during the war or in 1946 or 1947 when there were no freshman teams, no freshman rules. That, he added, did not include Gambino.)

"We are not trying to hide the fact that Gambino has played three years of varsity football," Dr. Byrd added. "All we ask is that the conference be fair about its decision. There are a number of boys playing football in the conference who, in my opinion, are in their fourth and fifth year of varsity competition.

Doesn't Make Good Sense

"I am referring to those who played for two or three years at schools under the various Navy programs, but which time does not constitute varsity competition under Southern Conference interpretation.

"For anybody to say that one group of players who were sent to colleges by the Navy, where they played on varsity teams, may have five or six years of college football, but that Gambino, who served three years in the Air Force, shall have only three is just a bit beyond my idea of what constitutes good sense and fairness.

"Maryland this fall may play against some men who will actually be playing their fourth, fifth, or sixth year of college football. There are other men, besides Gambino, on the Maryland squad who will be playing their fourth year, and will be eligible under Conference rules exempting them from the effect of the rules during war time.

May Come Up Next Month

"In the light of this situation, to rule that Gambino is not eligible to play this fall does not, to me, make common sense, and certainly would not be good sportsmanship.

"Under the above circumstances, I advised our athletic people to regard Gambino as eligible. However, if the matter comes formally before the meeting of the executive committee of the conference early in September, the whole question will be threshed out.

"Under conditions and circumstances as they now exist, I could not conceive of other members of the conference voting Gambino ineligible, but if they do, while we may not like it, shall abide by the decision."

Carlton Champs Given Banquet

Dignified hotel executives broke bread with their bellhops, elevator operators and other employes of the lower echelons in the Carlton Hotel last night while the Carlton softball team received an ornate, double-decker trophy for winning the Hotel Association championship.

The victors were sent along to the D. C. Recreation Department playoffs with some inspiring sentiments by Frank Weakly, president of the Carlton, the Wardman Park, and the Hotel Association.

The Carlton team, which barely qualified, romped through the round-robin playoff mainly on the strength of Johnny Hughes' pitching.

Yanks-Nats Game Tonight Fetes Griff

The Nats play the Yankees at Griffith Stadium tonight, but the ball game is only of secondary importance.

Of prime importance to President Truman and the other thousands of friends of Clark Griffith, 78-year-old Nat owner, will be the pregame ceremonies honoring Griff for his long career in baseball.

To climax the Griffith Night testimonial, Mr. Truman will make a short address, praising his friend Griffith's service in baseball.

Mr. Truman heads the long list of prominent figures who will be on hand for the gala occasion. Baseball will be officially represented by Commissioner Happy Chandler and American League President Will Harridge, who will present Griff a plaque.

Old Timers Due

The affair, arranged by the Washington baseball writers and sports broadcasters, will also see practically every member of Griff's 1924 world's championship team and his 1933 American League pennant winners come back to Griffith Stadium for the occasion.

Managing the 1924 champs was Secondbaseman Bucky Harris, who tonight returns to the scene of his former conquests as manager of the Yankees, still in the thick of the pennant race despite two losses to the A's Sunday.

Others whose names bring back fond memories to local fans and who will be at the park this evening will be Joe Cronin, Roger Peckinpaugh, Muddy Ruel, Joe Judge, Ossie Bluege, Goose Goslin, Heinie Manusn, Buddy Myer, Sam Rice and a host of others.

Ceremonies at 6:15

The ceremonies begin at 6:15 o'clock when Goldman's Band begins to furnish music for the early arrivals. The game itself starts at 9:15 and will be followed by an elaborate fireworks display.

The Yankees, now five games back of the pacesetting Indians, will call on Rookie Righthander Bob Porterfield, recently called up from Newark where he won 14 games. Sid Hudson, trying to escape his thirteenth pitching defeat, works for the Nats.

The program:

6:15—Goldman's Band.

8:15—Army Band.

8:25—Arrival of President Truman.

8:30—Baseball acrobatics by Nick Altrock and Early Wynn.

8:35—Slides depicting Griff's career in baseball.

8:45—Introduction of dignitaries and former Washington players.

9—Presentation of plaques.

9:05—Address by President Truman.

9:15—Baseball: New York vs. Washington.

11:15—Fireworks.

Federal Wins Playoff Game

Ed Claxton's squeeze bunt in the seventh inning scored Pitcher Don Snider and gave Federal Storage Co. a 4-3 victory over Alexandria yesterday in the opening game of the Boys Club of Washington, Western Division championship series on the Ellipse.

The two-out-of-three series continues today at 5:30 p. m. on the North Ellipse.

Club members and special guests will join Freddie in celebrating the fortieth anniversary of his victory in the National Open tournament at Hamilton, Mass., Myopia Club in 1908.

Chris Heurich, jr., chairman of Columbia's golf committee, is in charge. About 200 will attend and Wiffy Cox, professional at the Congressional Country Club will be toastmaster.

Among the special guests will be Gen. Omar Bradley, Harry Parr 3d of Baltimore, Tommy Galloway, Richmond pro; Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase pro, and Dave Thompson, Washington Golf and Country Club pro.

shows. But the publicity department advised him to change plans "because the picture has a sad enough ending as it is."

McMillan, who lives at 7 Leighton pl., Silver Spring, said, "It's a blessing that he didn't have to suffer further with whatever disease he had. He was a great man."

IT WAS LEARNED THAT the Babe had planned to attend the first showing of the film here last week, but his sudden turn for the worse, of course, changed the plans.

Burton Lustine, 14, of 1619 Allison st. nw.; Jackie Jaffe, 14, of 2939 Cleveland ave. nw., and Terry Maher, 13, of 4222 14th st. nw., said they'd only seen him in newspaper pictures. But Terry said: "He must have been a great guy to have thought so much of kids. I would like to have seen him play ball."

Discussing the Babe brought back fond memories to John V. Whaley, 2519 North Capitol st., a rabid baseball follower since his youth. "I saw Washington win the 1924 World Series," he said, "but my greatest thrill was seeing the great Babe hit his famous home run over the centerfield flagpole right here at Griffith Stadium. That was the longest drive ever hit here, I believe."

"No sir, the Williamses and Musials will come and go, but there'll never be another Babe Ruth," concluded Whaley.

COMMENT—From P. 18

Tribute Paid To Bambino

And it grieves me greatly that we've lost him.

"His was the American story, the boy who came up from obscurity to learn the people's game and go on to be a great national hero. His deeds will be an inspiration for the children of the world who will try to emulate him."

BILL MEYER, manager of the Pirates, and one of the very few men in baseball today who batted against Babe Ruth when he was a pitcher with the Red Sox, was deeply shocked at Ruth's death.

"He certainly will be an immortal in baseball," Meyer said. "He was a great figure. That he was also a great pitcher as well as a hitter, is almost forgotten.

"I batted against him in 1916 when I caught for the Philadelphia Athletics, and he was as good as they came."

FORMER PRESIDENT Herbert Hoover:

"He was a great sportsman in the very best sense of the term."

Mr. Hoover then recalled a public gathering in Los Angeles when he was approached by a small boy who asked for his autograph.

"Would you mind giving me three?" the boy asked.

Mr. Hoover complied but asked the boy why he wanted three.

"Because it takes two of yours to trade for one of Babe Ruth's," he replied.

TRIS SPEAKER, famed "Gray Eagle" outfielder who played with Ruth in Boston when "The Babe" entered the American League, said:

"I am very sad to hear that the Babe has died. It is a great loss to the baseball world and, especially, to the kids, for he was their champion.

"I remember the Babe more clearly as a great pitcher than as the greatest home-run slugger in the history of baseball. He once said, and I agreed with him, that his record of pitching 29 straight scoreless innings in World Series competition will never be broken, although his homer marks may fall."

BUCKY HARRIS, manager, New York Yankees: "The greatest hitter and greatest competitor of all time has passed away."

The Annadale Co. nine eliminated King's Park Inn from the District Amateur Softball Association championship last night at Greenbelt by a score of 8-1. In another championship game there, I. B. M. beat Mount Rainer, 3-2

Braves Bow To Brooks Again, 6-2

Boston, Aug. 16 (AP).—Brooklyn's Dodgers hustled to within two games of first place in the National League tonight by whipping the league-leading Braves, 6-2, before 31,432 paid fans, some of which booed the pace setters loudly during the eighth inning when the Brooks sashayed into four runs.

It was the third victory for the Dodgers in the five-game setto between the clubs.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Agencies Can Add 54,351 Jobs During Last 1948 Quarter

The Budget Bureau yesterday informed Federal agencies that they could add a net increase of 54,351 jobs in the three months of October, November and December. The expansion will put the number of Government workers back over the 2,100,000 figure.

Most of the increases will be in the field, although there will be some additions to staffs here.

Twenty-four agencies were allowed increases that total 78,551 for the second quarter of the fiscal year. However, the remaining agencies must reduce staff by 24,200, making the net increase of 54,351.

The major increase will be in the Postoffice Department to care for the Christmas flood of mail. Postoffice had its personnel ceiling raised by 60,112. Between them, the Army, Navy, and Air Forces will be allowed to hire 10,141 additional civilians in the three-month period. Other big increases are the Veterans' Administration,4681, and the Treasury Department, 1976.

Principal decreases ordered by the Budget Bureau are: Agriculture Department, 7276; Panama Railroad, 6506, and War Assets, 8014. Actually, the only real layoff will take place in War Assets. The Agriculture reduction can be taken care of easily by the normal end of seasonal work in the forests and farms, and the Panama Railroad "reduction" is a paper transaction since its employes are no longer counted against the ceiling fixed by the Budget Bureau. No Panama employe will lose his job.

On increases, the main expansion in Postoffice will be temporary. However, the department, which is doing a record business is hiring thousands of new employes on a permanent basis. The increase in the military agencies will be throughout the world, some in this city. At VA, the increase there will be confined largely to the Department of Medicine and Surgery, and an expansion of Internal Revenue accounts mainly for the Treasury expansion.

The increase in Federal employment is becoming a political issue. Republicans are charging that people are being placed on the Federal payroll by the Administration in the hope they will vote for the President's reelection. But the larger appropriations to build up the Federal force was considered in detail and approved by the GOP Congress. Senator Byrd didn't even object to the larger appropriations to expand the Government—until after they had been approved when nothing could be done about them.

STORY: Cynical newsmen who cover the Capitol Hill spy hearings have a name for Elizabeth Bentley, the star witness and accuser. They call her "Red Amber."

NOTES: Robert Denham, the general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board who had a breakdown from overwork, is recovering nicely. He expects to return to work about October 1. . . . Philip V. Cardon is director and Dr. Byron T. Shaw is deputy of the Agricultural Research Administration. Dr. Cardon was recently given the department's distinguished service award for his outstanding service in advancing agriculture science. . . . Don't be surprised if William Tyson, Labor Department solicitor, is moved up to undersecretary of that department.

JOBS: Civil Service yesterday opened up three tests which thousands of persons here will be sure to take. They are:

Printer assistant jobs in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. They pay $1.10 an hour. Women are preferred. Those who apply will be given a written test. The age limit from 18 to 45 will be waived for those with veterans' preference.

Elevator operators. Salaries range from $1.10 an hour to $2020 to $2152 a year. There is no age limit for applicants and no written test will be given. Applicants must have had from 3 to 6 months actual experience in operating an elevator. The exam is limited now to those with veterans' preference.

Engineers at the P-1 level. The salary is $2974 to start. No written test. Senior students who will complete their college course in six months will be accepted. Please get further details at Civil Service.

RETIREMENTS: At the end of this month, Joseph B. Lynch, an administrative officer in Treasury's Bureau of Public Debt will retire. At the same time in the same office, Annie O. Kuyk and Louise S. Baughman will retire . . . Mary F. Doggs, a charwoman in the Munitions Building, will retire from Public Buildings next week. She has never been late for work in her 30 years in Government.

AFGE: A. P. Harrison, a member of Lodge 490 in Los Angeles, is a candidate for president of the AFL's American Federation of Government Employes. And reports reaching here indicate that he will have wide West Coast support. Among the lodges that have voted to support him are No. 51 in San Francisco which is the home local of James Burns who is running for reelection as president.

2 Workmen Hurt in Collapse Of Floor in Taft School Annex

The Washington Post

COLLAPSE AT SCHOOL—Workmen attack the tangle of wires, cement and steel rods after the fall of a roof in process of construction on an annex to Taft Junior High School at 18th and Perry sts. ne. Two men were injured.

A large section of the second floor of the new Taft Junior High School annex collapsed about noon yesterday, injuring two workmen who rode to the first floor atop an estimated 150 tons of freshly-laid concrete and steel.

At least four other men, all of whom were finishing the concrete when it gave way, fell with it to the ground floor but were unhurt. The injured were:

G. C. Mancuso, 63, of 908 I st. se., and Vincent A. Trimboli, 35, of 5410 Meadow View dr. se. Mancuso, treated first at the Workmen's Compensation clinic for multiple contusions, was later transferred to Emergency Hospital, where his condition last night was reported good. Trimboli was treated for bruises.

William Cassap, District resident engineer at the construction, blamed structural failure of temporary concrete supports for the cave-in. Cassap said he was watching the supports on the first floor while the cement finishers worked about 13 feet above him on the second floor. He jumped to safety, he said, as he heard the wire mesh crackle "just like a big fire," and then the floor slowly buckled.

M. D. Dunlap, general manager of Jeffress-Dyer, Inc., builders of the annex, said he did not know what caused the collapse. He put the damage at $5000. Completion of the annex, at South Dakota ave. and Perry st. ne., may be delayed a month, he said.

The 60-by-30-foot section held an estimated 150 tons of 15-inch thick concrete, according to Rafael Lenck, job superintendent for the construction firm. Lenck had 30 men cleaning it up within minutes after the cave-in.

Municipal Architect Merrel A. Coe, who visited the scene, said, "We don't yet know why it gave way," but predicted the work, which is scheduled for completion by July 9, 1949, would not be thrown off schedule. The annex is to be a two-story building.

Archie G. Hutson, D. C. construction director, promised a "thorough investigation." He pointed out, however, that there is "no connection between accidents occurring during construction and the safety of a completed building."

Under the D. C. construction code, a contractor is required to make a report on accidents to the Director of Industrial Safety for the District.

With Mother

Father Ends Court Fight To Get Baby

Francis T. Leahy, jr., 37, of 3871 Porter st. nw., yesterday gave up, at least temporarily, his court battle to regain custody of his 9-month-old son, William.

The Navy Department communications expert, through his attorney requested and received dismissal of the habeas corpus writ he obtained to get the infant from Francis Keene, 28, 5224 Sherrier pl. nw., a telephone repairman.

In his petition, Leahy said that his wife, Rita, 30, was in Florida seeking a diverce. Leahy averred that he believed that Rita and Keene intended to be married after the divorce was granted.

But in court, Leahy's attorney Harry J. Ahern, said that the mother once again had custody of the child and had returned from Florida, although she is not with Leahy.

"My client does not wish to challenge the mother's right to custody at this time," Ahern said.

Keene and Mrs. Leahy were in court. Keene is represented by Bernard Margolius.

Trade Board Recommends Airstrip on Kingman Is.

Skyway Sponsors To Push Program For Private Pilot Facilities Here

Construction of a flight strip on Kingman Island in the Anacostia River for private fliers has been recommended by the Executive Committee of the Washington Board of Trade.

The committee adopted a special report by the board's aviation committee, which recommended immediate acquisition of the island to fill a "long awaited need" and "make air travel to Washington more attractive than ever before."

The Board of Trade jointly sponsored Skyway One with the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce as first in a network of marked air highways to increase safety for private plane owners. Use of Kingman Island as a private port would "advance the usefulness of the skyway," according to the report.

Hopes for Agreement

Leon Chatelain, jr., trade board president, said the group hopes to bring Federal Government and District heads into agreement on a plan to construct a port on the island, which is Federally owned.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission fiatly rejected recommendations for use of Kingman island for aviation purposes because the surrounding area is too thickly populated.

Present plans are to reclaim the island land, and turn it over to the National Parks Service. However, the Civil Aeronautice Authority has stated it is the" best available site" for a private airfield in Washington CAA has $132,964 earmarked for Washington airport work on a matching-fund basis, but cannot move without action by the District Commissioners. The District has six years in which to use the money.

Only Available Site

Chatelain said that after a year's study of the proposal, "we still think we are right." He pointed out that the island is the only available location within the District of Columbia for a private flying terminal to relieve overcrowded facilities at the National Airport.

The Aviation Committee report did not estimate cost of constructing an air strip, but predicted initial costs would consist "chiefly of the improvement of land and the construction of the necessary administration buildings.

"No cost would be incurred for acquisition of the land, as this land is under Federal ownership. No cost for flood protection would be incurred as the filling of this land is currently being done by the Army Corps of Engineers as a part of the dredging of the channel."

The report recommended construction of a runway not less than 3000 feet long nor more than 150 feet wide. It also recommended removal of obstructions on Benning Road Bridge and Highway projecting into the glide path; reduction in the height of Potomac Electric Power Co. smokestacks projecting into turning angles or glide paths, and moving the flight strip "as far to the west as possible" on the island "to secure increased safety factors."

Tenants Ask Reduction at Rent Hearing

A hearing held yesterday on a proposed 16 per cent rent increase for 412 units of the Good Hope Hills Apartments was continued until 9:30 a. m. today by Examiner Denis K. Lane, after owners' figures on higher operating costs were challenged by counsel for tenants.

W. Leroy Saunders, vice president and treasurer of Waverly-Taylor, Inc., owner, testified that costs of operating and maintain in operating costs had been about $64,000 since March, 1943, year in which the first apartments were completed.

He said the cost of maintaining the full 412 units in 1943 was an estimated figure for purposes of comparison, since all the apartments were not completed and occupied until November, 1945.

Max Katz, account t testifying for the tenants, said the increase in operating coss had been about $32,000 since the end of 1946, first calendar year in which all 412 of the apartments were occupied. He had previously examined records of the owners.

A counter-claim to the owners' demand for a rent increase, dated August 13, was presented by Jacob L. Burch, lawyer for the Good Hope Hills Tenants Association. It asked for a 10 per cent reduction in maximum rents.

Examiner Lane took the petition under advisement, when Ernest Henry, lawyer for Waverly-Taylor, pointed out it should have been filed five days or more before the hearing, according to regulations. The petition charged the owners with "failure to provide adequate heat and hot water, to render adequate repairs, or to maintain adequate janitor service."

Saunders, testifying for the owners, said 35 apartments had been completely repainted since June, 1947, and 25 apartments had been "partially" painted, including at least the kitchen and bath.

The hearing, held yesterday at the District Rent Control Office, 1740 Massachusetts ave. nw., involved units of the Good Hope Hills development on 28th st. se. from the 2800 through the 3200 block, on 30th st se. in the 3000 block, and on Buena Vista Terrace and Jasper st. in the 3100 block.

Tenants of the development are scheduled to testify at today's hearing, which also will deal proposed 16 per cent rent increases for 30 additional apartments on the 2900 block of 30th st. se.

8 Appointed Falls Church City Officials

The outgoing Falls Church City Council last night made the first eight appointments to posts in the one-day-old new city government.

Falls Church officially became a Virginia city of the second class yesterday by order of the Fairfax Circuit Court. The court must still approve all eight appointments made last night.

In its appointments, the council named LaRue Van Meter for the city post of Commissioner of Revenue. Van Meter, who has been the Falls Church town attorney, is employed in the Justice Department.

Recommended for city treasurer was James E. Ferguson, 125 S. Spring st., present town bookkeeper who has also been functioning as treasurer under the town government.

Three members at large to the city electoral board also were named. They were: Lawrence E. Laing, 111 S. Oak st.; J. Morton Franklin, 310 Sycamore st., and Franklin Thackrey, 102 West Rosemary le.

Recommended as Justice of the Peace in the first city ward was W. F. Edmonds, 133 East Broad st.; in the second ward, Clarence M. Dale, 396 N. Washington st., and third ward, John E. Blackburn, 308 Grove st.

All recommendations had been worked out last Friday by the new city council which takes office September 1. The old council merely ratified their wishes.

The new council will be made up of four incumbent councilmen, two newly elected members, and will be headed by new mayor-elect Albert M. Orme, a Commerce Department employe.

The outgoing council will hold its final meeting at 8 p. m. August 31 in the city hall to wind up old business.

Twenty-four hours later the mayor, who in turn will swear outgoing Mayor Fenner Hazelgrove will swear in the new Mayor, who in turn will swear in the new council.

That group will then appoint three new council members who will round out its number to nine in accordance with State law; and probably appoint a city police court judge and a city clerk.

Clouds Cause Double Halo Around Sun; D. C. Weather Bureau Besieged by Calls

The Washington Post

MIGHTY ARC—Phone lines were in a furor yesterday afternoon when Washingtonians saw a vast halo around the sun, and called everybody they thought might be able to explain it. The great circle was caused when sunlight glinted on clouds composed of ice crystals

Washington basked under a double-haloed sun yesterday afternoon for nearly three hours.

It was a fairly unusual occasion and, according to the weatherman, would have had some meteorological significance had the haloes appeared in winter time.

Wintertime haloes around the sun usually mean "precipitation," said the weatherman. The ones we had yesterday aren't going to mean anything, he said, because they were produced from a cirrostratus cloud belt running parrallel to Washington, moving from west to east, and destined approximately for southern Virginia, where it's supposed to rain today.

Washington was right on the edge of the cloud belt which produced the haloes. Meteorologically, they were caused by "refraction of light from the sun as it passes through high thin clouds composed of ice crystals."

This explanation was put on the Weather Bureau automatic recorder in response to hundreds of phone calls on the phenomena. Scientists at the Georgetown University Observatory yesterday said that while there frequently are single haloes around the sun, of approximately 22 degrees radius, the 46 degree halo which also was seen yesterday is more rare. Usually, both single and double haloes are seen at night.

Washington weather-conscious residents yesterday had something besides haloes to consider. For the first time since the Weather Bureau began keeping records in 1872, the temperature has stayed below 86 during the first 16 days of August. The high yesterday was 84. The low last night was expected to be 66.

Today the city is due for cloudiness, more humidity, and a high of 86 degrees.

And, besides that, the pollen count is with us again. Proof that the hay fever season is almost here was Sunday's count of .15 grains, yesterday's count of 4 grains. The count, prepared by the D. C. Medical Society, will be carried daily in the "Weather Ear" on page one of The Washington Post.

Woman Wondered If World Would End

The Weather Bureau got an estimated 300 calls yesterday during the three hours the haloes were visible around the sun.

Most fascinating call of all was that from a woman resident who wanted to know whether the haloes portended the "end of time."

When the weatherman explained what the haloes were all about, the woman said, "Well, if it had been the end of time, I'd want to call my minister. I'd want to be real sure, first, though."

Said the weatherman: "I guess she wanted a reserved seat, and wanted to be sure it was time to put in her bid."

Finance Aide Indicted for Impersonation

A man who says he is a local finance company assistant manager was indicted here yesterday on a charge of posing as a G-man in attempting to find a client.

Indicted on the impersonation charge was Samuel M. Miller, 38, of 4708 Monroe st., Bladensburg, Md. The complainant, Mrs. Evelyn L. Beach, 1630 Lyman pl. ne., said he went to her home January 22 and told her he was a Justice Department agent. He was looking for her brother, John Rossignol, she said.

Miller, on the other hand, told officials that he merely described himself as an "investigator." He is with the Aetna Finance Co., Silver Spring, Md., according to court papers.

Embezzling Charged

In another indictment, Arthur F. Brommer, 26, 1508 Olive st. ne. was charged with embezzling $1500 from the Mayflower Motors, Inc., where he was a used-car buyer. Police said that Brommer had been gambling and took the funds in order to make up his losses.

Raymond L. Hudson, 35, no fixed address, was charged with impersonating an Army sergeant in order to get treatment for drug addiction at Walter Reed Hospital.

James E. Harris, 30, of 1215 Stevens rd. se., was indicted on a charge of raping a 47-year-old matron July 24.

Emanuel R. Galloway, 44, of 1031 Lamont st. nw., was charged with first-degree murder in the ice-pick stabbing of Carl Crawford, 34, of 1034 Kenyon st. nw.

2 Chinese Indicted

Fong Yike Wing, 5515 Colorado ave. nw., and Eng Yee Fee, 1202 K st. nw., were charged with violating Federal narcotics laws. Police said the two men on May 18 were found with 4542 grains of smoking opium and 17,715 grains of crude opium.

Three youths were indicted for the yoke-robbery of Evan T. Davis, former Assistant United States Attorney here, on the street in the 800 block of 1st st. nw. on June 12. The defendants are Monroe Jones, 17, of 37 I st. ne.; Morris Butler, 18, no known address, and Thomas Morrow, 25, of 26 I st. ne. Davis lost $75.50 in the robbery.

Frank E. Brown, 37, of 622 Massachusetts ave. ne. was indicted on charges of setting up a gaming table, possession of numbers slips and operating a lottery on July 4.

Trouble Enough

Dentist Saves Motorist Parking Fine

A ticket given to a motorist for overtime parking was adjusted to a warning when police heard his explanation, and decided he had had enough trouble: He'd been delayed in his dentist's office.

The driver was listed by police as Herbert C. Coale, 39, of 3149 Mount Pleasant st. nw. He was one of 92 persons for whom traffic tickets were adjusted last week.

Another driver whose explanation for a parking violation won police sympathy was Edward W. Kibbey, 56, of 1407 Emerson st. nw. He said he was delayed making funeral arrangements for his wife's aunt.

Others for whom tickets were fixed because of unusual excuses were:

Nellie C. Ingalls, 56, of 59 Longfellow st. nw., who said she was delayed because her mother was injured in a department store.

James J. Smith, 38, of 1 49th st. se., who said he was detained in police court.

The Rev. Charles W. Nelson, 38, assistant pastor of St. Peter's Church, of 313 2d st. se., delayed purchasing church materials for a parochial school event.

Adjustments were granted eight motorists with disabled cars: seven out-of-town visitors; 19 drivers with good records, and three diplomats—Osvaldo Gomez, 27, of 5630 16th st. nw., Argentine Embassy, overtime parking; Comdr. Oscar J. R. Rumbo, Argentine air attache 1816 Corcoran st. nw., overtime parking, and Claudio Ferreira, 3600 Massachusetts ave. nw., no-parking zone, son of the Brazilian air attache, Brig. Gen. I. C. Ferreria.

House to Probe Gray Market In Area Autos

Public hearings on gray market deals in automobiles in the Greater Washington area may be called "within the next three weeks to two months."

E. R. Ferguson, jr., assistant counsel to the House Subcommittee to Investigate Questionable Trade Practices, said yesterday that hearings will be held "when we are absolutely sure of our grounds."

He said committee investigators are presently working on between 80 and 125 complaints of unfair trade practices in automobiles, against dealers both in Washington and in nearby Maryland and Virginia.

These complaints, he said, fall into "pretty definit patterns." Many individuals report "bad beatings" on trade-in values. Others charge dealers with holding deposits for new cars for too long a time. Others charge car purchasers have been overloaded with accessories.

When the public hearings are held, Ferguson said, both reputable dealers in the area and the "non-reputable" dealers against whom charges have been substantiated by investigation will be called to testify.

Ferguson said he hoped the hearings will be "of as much benefit to reputable dealers as they will be to the general public."

Bethesdans to Picnic

Bethesda Democrats and Republicans will oppose each other in a softball game Wednesday which will high light the annual Bethesda Chamber of Commerce mid-summer outing at the Bethesda Country Club.

Other features will be a golf tournament, a buffet supper and horseshoe pitching.

Fight Over Parking Meters Threatened in Hyattsville

The Hyattsville City Council was warned in a stormy session last night that if it installs parking meters in the city's streets it may face a court test of the legality of meter purchases.

The warning came from Harvey G. Machen, assistant State's attorney who attended the council meeting as a private attorney. Machen refused to give full details on who his clients are in the matter, but did state that Daniel Burke, president of the Hyattsville Businessmen's Association is one of the men who have retained him.

Machen's warning was one of a series of stormy incidents at the meeting, which saw Acting Mayor H. Wilson Spicknall called upon twice to break indecisive votes and insure council action.

Spicknall cast the deciding vote for a resolution directing the city attorney to prepare specifications for parking meters and invite sealed bids. Frederick M. Coxen voted "present" on the motion, and the vote of councilmen had been 4-2 in favor of the action, one vote short of the five necessary for affirmative action under the city charter.

Spicknall also intervened in the councils' vote on the number of parking meters it would purchase. Three motions, or substitute motions, were introduced, calling for purchase of 251 meters, the number used in previous studies of the plan; 243, the number decided upon by the city engineer and the mayor after a survey, and 200 which was suggested last night.

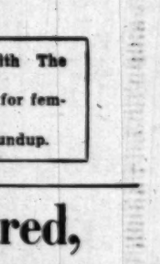
Coxen, who had presented the motion for purchase of 243 meters, said he thought he was "wasting" his time when the motion failed, and left the meeting. The moion for purchase of 200 meters was carried.

4 Injured, 1 Critically, In Area Auto Accidents

Boy, 2½, Run Over By Father; Girl, 18, Man Accused of Reckless Driving

Four persons were injured in Greater Washington traffic accidents yesterday, one critically, as police charged one man with manslaughter and another with reckless driving in a three-car crash near Fredericksburg, Va., Sunday night in which two persons were killed.

In a freak accident in nearby Montgomery County, Md., a father ran a truck over the left leg of his 2½-year-old son. The father was identified by police as Carl Pace, a tree expert who lives in Washington Grove, Md.



Jackie Pace

Pace was backing a truck in his rear yard, police said, and failed to see his son, Jackie, who was hidden in tall weeds. The child was admitted to Suburban Hospital with a fractured left femur.

John Grund 50, of Morley Park, Glen Burnie, Md., a Naval Gun Factory employe was in critical condition in Prince Georges General Hospital as the result of an early morning accident on Defense Highway near Collington, Md. Police said Grund apparently became ill while he was driving, ran off the road, hitting a road sign and a tree. Hospital officials said he may have sustained a fractured skull.

At almost the same spot on the Defense Highway, Mrs. Edith Rensberger of 741 Trinidad ave. ne., suffered a fractured nose when the car in which she was a passenger was struck by a car operated by Rosa M. Johnson, 18, of 550 Hobart pl. nw.

Police said the Johnson car went out of control rounding a turn, skidded 450 feet, veered to the left and turned over on the Rensberger car.

Marion C. Rensberger, 34, driver of the car, sustained arm lacerations. Mrs. Rensberger was taken to Prince Georges General Hospital. Miss Johnson has been charged by police with reckless driving and placed under $300 bond for her appearance in Hyattsville Police Court August 19.

In a fourth accident yesterday, Frank Gassway, 30, of Gosphen, Md., narrowly escaped serious injury when a truck he was driving was struck by a Baltimore & Ohio train at Gaithersburg, Md. Police said the truck, which was demolished, was struck in the rear. Gassway was admitted to Suburban Hospital with head lacerations and a toe cut.

Virginia State Police said yesterday a technical manslaughter charge has been placed against Irvin Dinkle, 29, of Richmond, driver of the Greyhound Bus involved in the Fredericksburg crash Sunday night. August F. Sirles, 41, also of Richmond, driver of an automobile involved in the wreck, has been charged with reckless driving. No charges have been placed against the driver of the truck; its surviving occupants are still in Mary Washington Hospital in Fredericksburg.

Two persons died in the three-car crash, and eight other persons were injured, at least two of them seriously.

The dead have been identified by State Police as Carrie Banks, 35, of 433 8th st. sw., and Wilbur Washington, 3, of Caroline County, Va.

Both of the dead persons and seven of the eight hospital cases were occupants of the truck, according to State Trooper S. H. Raines.

Most seriously injured were Purcell Peyton, 36, of 433 8th st. sw., driver; Eugene Yager, 34, of 1013 Maryland ave. sw., both of whom had fractured femurs. Others admitted were Willie Washington, 15, of Caroline County, Va., believed to be a brother of the dead boy; Melvin Carter, 34, of 439 9th st. sw.; Marie Cater, about 30, of the same address; John Cousar, 37, of 414 8th st. nw., and Odessa McLain, 33, of Richmond.

Area News in Brief

Suspect Is Traced Through Auto Tag

Police worked 10 hours checking auto tag numbers in order to arrest Marcus Lee Pettit, 24, insurance salesman, charged with assaulting a woman as she entered a front yard early yesterday.

The woman, Mrs. Virginia Parsons, 20, of 1222 B st. ne., said that Pettit grabbed her by her shoulders and put his hand over her mouth. She said she fended him off and he fled to his automobile. She was able to tell police that he drove a 1941 Oldsmobile and that the last three numbers of its tag were "something like "775."

Corp. Francis E. Davis of the Ninth Precinct began checking license tag listing and discovered a 4-7745 on an Oldsmobile listed to Pettit. Pettit was arrested and identified by Mrs. Parsons.

In Municipal Court yesterday, Pettit was held under $300 bond for jury trial October 12. Pettit resides at 3130 Dunbarton ave. nw.

33,000 Dogs Get Shots

The District vaccinated 23,937 dogs against rabies during the four weeks ending last Friday, Health Department officials reported yesterday.

The total was 500 more than the year before. It does not include an additional estimated 10,000 dogs that have been vaccinated this summer by private veterinarians.

Health officials pointed out that vaccinated dogs now have a tag to show they have been treated. The officials said that owners of dogs now found without these tags are liable to prosecution, and upon conviction would be liable to a fine of up to $300.

Battle of Leftovers

Serving leftovers to some husbands is touchy business.

Charles Young, 46, of 222 F st. sw., was hailed into Municipal Court yesterday by his wife, Mary, 27, who charged him with slapping her. She said she served him warmed-over stew and leftover half-smoked sausages, and he was most vituperative. One thing led to another, she said, and it wasn't long before she was slapped in the face and he was hit in the chest with a chair.

Although Young pleaded guilty, Judge Armond Scott found him innocent. The jurist held there was some doubt as to who started the fight and it was just a domestic quarrel anyway.

Man Fined $150

Thomas L. Harris, 42, 1339 Q st. nw., was fined $150 yesterday in Hyattsville Police Court on charges of indecent exposure and assault.

Harris appeared before Trial Magistrate Arthur Owens on charges of indecent exposure before two women on an East Riverdale bus, assault on one of the women and assault on Pvt. Joseph Hill, Prince Georges County policeman, who brought Harris to the station.

200 Kinds of Fish Due

They have been collected by Donald S. Erdman of the Smithsonian Institution staff from the waters of the Persian Gulf and the Red Sea.

The fish are to be added to the collection of the United States National Museum. Erdman got the specimens while conducting a fisheries survey for the Arabian-American Oil Co. Many of the Red Sea fishes are of varieties mentioned in Biblical accounts.

Girl Injured in Fall

A 16-year-old Arlington girl fell from her second story window while painting yesterday, suffering possible wrist and elbow fractures.

Police said Miss Nancy Jane Walsh had been sitting in the window painting the exterior of her home at 3709 S. Kemper dr. when she fell out backwards. Unconscious when police arrived, she regained consciousness before reaching the hospital.

3 Youths Face Court

Arrested in a predawn chase of two cars through downtown Washington Sunday, three youths were charged yesterday in Municipal Court with nearly a score of law violations.

Cecil E. McDougal, 23, of 4435 P st. nw., was charged with taking property without right and 13 traffic counts. His case was continued until October 12. Bond was $500.

The other two, Samuel L. Gray, 18, of 712 3d st. se., and Clifton Davis, 18, of 304 G st. sw., were held under $1000 bond for the grand jury on an auto theft charge. Gray was also charged with seven traffic violations for jury trial October 12. A 17-year-old occupant of one of the cars was held for Juvenile Court.

Workman Hurt in Fall

A man suffered a broken back and paralysis of both legs in a fall of 30 feet from a tree yesterday on the farm of Drew Pearson, newspaper columnist, near Potomac, Md.

The victim, Charles Brunner of Route 4, Frederick, Md., was said by police to have been in a crew felling the tree for extension of River road.

Flier's Body Recovered

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 16 (AP).—Navy divers have recovered the body of Ensign Joseph G. R. Gosselin, USNR, 22, who was killed last Friday when his plane crashed in the Atlantic 20 miles off Norfolk.

Hundreds Attend First Day as Chevy Chase Branch Library Returns to Brown School

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

Daniel Kobal, 8, of 5616 Nevada ave. nw., is helped with selection of a book by Miss Margaret Poarch, Children's Librarian

Judging from attendance at the debut yesterday of Washington's newest public library location, the younger generation and the old have taken a hint from the eminent essayist, Francis Bacon.

It was at the E. V. Brown School, where the Chevy Chase branch library returned amid bright and airy surroundings to the place of its birth 28 years ago on the corner of Connecticut ave. and McKinley st.

Scores of well-mannered, school-age literati and uncounted, adult book-lovers, perhaps unconsciously, seemed to hark back to the seventeenth century when Mr. Bacon (who, it has been whispered, wrote Shakespeare) remarked:

"Some books are to be tasted, others to be swallowed, and some few to be chewed and digested."

Eight-year-old Daniel Kobal, 5616 Nevada ave. nw., was a study in profound contemplation as he sat with his forehead in hands, and "chewed" the contents of "Dr. Doolittle's Post Office."

"They've been coming in all day long, with their eyes staring wide," said Miss Margaret Poarch, 3800 T st. nw., children's librarian. "Many of them have gone home and brought their parent backs."

The youthful clientele at the library, some of them too young to do more than look at the pictures, stifled their squeals of delight over the 8000 volumes at their disposal.

In the library's other wing—equipped with half a dozen stalls banked by two sets of shelves, bookcases lining the main walls and a comfortable reading room—older devotees of the printed word browsed through some 13,000 volumes.

Miss Jane Page, branch librarian, was absent at the moment, but there was ample evidence that the Chevy Chase branch was functioning smoothly on its first day.

John Barrett, 18, of 3735 Kanawha st. nw., reported from the horseshoe-shaped charging desk that about 400 books had been checked out by 4 p. m.

"We've been able to satisfy practically everyone except those who want some of the latest mystery stories," he said.

Bustling about to get things in shape was Harry N. Peterson, chief librarian of the Public Library of the District.

He cited these outstanding advantages of the new location, which supplants the branch formerly situated at 3816 Livingston st. nw.: added floor space for greater "on-premises use," better physical facilities for comfort, and greater book capacity.

Residents of Chevy Chase have provided about 1300 of the new books in the library, not to mention four lounging chairs, a music record player and a language record player. The library, which had only 400 volumes when founded 28 years ago, is a part of the Chevy Chase Community Center. It will be open from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m., Mondays through Fridays, and from 9 a. m. to 1 p. m. Saturdays.

"And it is the answer to the prayers of citizens out here," Peterson said.

Takoma Park Adopts Ruling On Walks, Streets and Curbs

An ordinance requiring subdividers and individuals building new streets, sidewalks, curbs and gutters to meet definite standards was adopted last night by the City Council of Takoma Park.

Effective August 16, the ordinance called for rules and regulations fixing minimum specifications for the development with a cost borne by the subdividers. The preliminary plans before permits are issued must be approved by the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission.

The council approved recommendations made by the Citizens Advisory Committee, created to propose changes in the city charter. Headed by City Councilman W. H. McClenon, the committee recommended that the election board be changed to provide for election of councilmen with overlapping terms, so that there would be a complete turnover of council members at one time.

The council also approved the committee's recommendations that the city election date be changed from the first Monday in May to the first Tuesday in March; additional polling places and use of voting machines instead of the written ballot sysem now in use.

These amendments to the city charter must be passed by the Maryland State Assembly at its 1949 session.

The council also voted to advertise for bids for the purchase of two new police cars.

CTC Would Open Md. Bus Route Along Sheriff Rd.

The Capital Transit Company yesterday asked permission to establish a bus line along Sheriff rd. in Maryland, for a distance of about 1.3 miles between the District line and a point just east of Cedar Heights, Md.

Applications for the new X-8 line, which would start operating September 5 on an experimental basis, were filed by the Transit Co. with the Maryland Public Service Commission and the District Public Utilities Commission.

Buses would operate every 20 minutes during rush hours, and every 30 minutes at other times. The X-8 line would connect with Route U-4, which provides service from the District line at Sheriff rd. to downtown Washington during rush hours, and to 34th st. and Benning rd. ne. during non-rush hours.

The proposed bus line would serve about 700 families who live within a half mile of it. Fare would be 5 cents with no transfers to District buses.

Airport Manager, Tick Fever Case, Reported Better

George Brinckerhoff, 50, owner of the College Park airport, who is in Prince Georges County General Hospital with Rocky Mountain spotted fever, was reported slightly improved last night.

He has received injections of an experimental drug, auremycin, which has proved effective in cases of spotted fever. The drug was obtained from Childrens Hospital.

Brinckerhoff discovered a tick on his body August 6 when he was in Miami, Fla., to pick up a plane. It is believed that he carried it with him from this area. He developed a high fever last Wednesday and was admitted to the hospital Saturday night.

National Guard Now Has Its First Jet Fighters

The National Guard now has its first jet fighter planes.

Marking the gradual conversion of the Air National Guard from wartime planes, 15 Lockheed F-80C Shooting Star fighters have been delivered to squadrons in California and Nebraska.

Ten of the jets went to the 196th Fighter Squadron at San Bernardino, Calif., and five others to the 178th Fighter Squadron at Lincoln, Nebr. In addition, the National Guard Bureau said, two more jets are en route to the 132d Fighter Squadron, Bangor, Me.

3 Women Run Afoul of Liquor, Gaming Laws

Two sisters and a woman friend were charged yesterday in Municipal Court with gaming and liquor law violation growing out of a raid early Sunday at 614 3d st. nw.

Louise Cannon, 29, of 614 3d st. nw., was held under $2000 bond on a charge of setting up a gaming table. This case was continued until August 30 for a hearing. On whisky charges against her, jury trial was set for October 12.

Her sister, Theda Mae Cannon, 21, of the same address, posted $1500 bond for keeping and selling whisky. October 12 is the date for the jury trial.

The third woman, Mrs. Geraldine Carter, 21, no fixed address, was placed under $1000 bond on a charge of setting up a gaming table. A hearing will be held August 30 in this case.

4 Men, 4 Women Safe After Being Adrift Overnight

Four men and four women of the Washington area who spent Sunday night and most of yesterday adrift in a fishing boat in the Chesapeake Bay were safely home last night.

The fishing party, which became adrift after the engine crankshaft broke, left Washington Sunday. The boat was towed into Galesville, Md., by another fishing boat. Five aboard the vessel were employes of the Day Engineering Co., 1400 Spring rd. nw. They were Robert V. Rollins, Margaret K. Batease, Lou Ann Bean, Ralph Lord and Eugene S. Day. Three others, Lord's wife, Doris; Alice Martin and a man whose name was not available also were aboard.

D.C. Young Republicans Open Their Campaign

The District's Young Republicans Club last night opened their 1948 campaign with the slogan, "Join the Drive to the White House."

More than 100 members meeting at the Dewey-Warren Club headquarters, 1430 K st. nw., adopted the club's program of full cooperation with the District Republican State Committee, that includes raising funds, servicing absentee voters and promotion of Republican Party activities in the area.

Alfred May, 81, Retired Dies in Mt. Alto

Alfred May, 81, a retired Naval Observatory employe, died Monday in Mount Alto Hospital of a heart ailment after an illness of seven months.

A native of London, England, he had been employed as a storekeeper at the Naval Observatory from World War I until his retirement in 1937 at the age of 70.

Mr. May came to the United States when he was about 40 years of age, and worked on a poultry farm near Yakima, Wash., before World War I.

He was an active member of the Guard of Honor of the American Legion, Sergt. Jasper Post No. 13. His Washington residence was 2317 37th st. nw.

Mr. May leaves a sister, Mrs. Lilla M. Bellinger of Detroit.

Funeral services will be held at Chambers' Georgetown funeral home, 3072 M st. nw., at 8 o'clock tonight. Graveside services will be held in Arlington Cemetery Wednesday at 1 p. m.

Auto Test Station Closed for Repairs

The District's Southwest motor vehicle testing station at 10th and F sts. sw. has closed this week for repairs, officials announced yesterday.

Next week the Northeast testing station, 1827 West Virginia ave. ne., will be closed Monday through Friday.

In announcing the repair program C. W. Reed, supervising inspector of the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, also indicated that auto owners could asl in writing to have inspection dates shifted if they conflict with vaaction plans.

Reed said calls for inspection this month have been issued for passenger cars with tag numbers running from 5-2801 to 5-8800; commercial vehicles with numbers from C-6501 to C-7500, and motorcycles with numbers from M-901 to M-1000.

Early Woman Journalist Dead at 102

Mrs. Mary Parks Macmillan, pioneer newspaper woman, died yesterday at the age of 102 at her home, 207 A st. ne.

Mrs. Macmillan was the widow of Flavious Macmillan, a one-time newspaper publisher in the Middle West and the mother of Miss Julia T. Macmillan, former professor of zoology at George Washington University.

Described by her daughter as a newspaper woman during the 1870's "when a woman's place was in the home," Mrs. Macmillan came to Washington with her husband in 1883.

She was born July 10, 1846, in Summit Township, Wis., the granddaughter of Maj. Warham Parks, a noted Revolutionary officer.

Educated by a governess, she moved to Kansas in 1872, where she met her future husband in Crocker City. Some of the trip was made by stagecoach, her daughter said.

Mrs. Macmillan helped her husband in publishing his newspaper as copyreader, proofreader and typesetter. They later lived in other Kansas towns and in Nebraska.

She frequently spoke of her experiences in the early life of the West, her daughter recalled, including vivid accounts of Indians, prairie fires, buffaloes and living conditions of pioneers.

Mrs. Macmillan was honored by the Washington Daughters of the American Revolution on the occasion of her 100th birthday July 10, 1946. She was one of the original members of the DAR, holding No. 883 in the association.

Her daughter is her only immediate survivor.

T. P. Moore, D. C. Printer, Dead at 85

Thomas Prettyman Moore, 85, veteran Washington printer, died yesterday at his home 211 Rosemary st., Chevy Chase, Md., after a long illness.

Mr. Moore

Mr. Moore had his own printing business in Washington for more than 50 years. His shop was at 10th and D sts. nw. for 20 years and later at 511 11th st. nw.

A native of Washington, he was the son of the late Dr. Joseph B. and Amelia Prettyman Moore, both of Georgetown. He was a member of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants of the District, the Naomi chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star in Bethesda, the Society of Natives and the B. B. French Lodge of the Masons.

Mr. Moores hobby was an active interest in the stage. He vividly recalled many old stage favorites, including John McCullough, Maggie Mitchell, Lawrence Bennett and Lotta Crabtree.

Mr. Moore leaves his wife, the former Emmaline Kinsinger; two sons, Thomas Linwood Moore, 8304 Custis la., Bethesda, and Maj. Robert B. Moore, St. Petersburg, Fla., and a daughter, Mrs. John B. Hill of the Rosemary street address.

He also leaves two brothers, William Nelson Moore, 6542 Maple ave., Chevy Chase, Md., and David Pelton Moore, New York City; two sisters, Dr. Rosalind Bain, 9210 Flower ave., Silver Spring, and Mrs. Bertha Dodge, Silver Spring, three grandchildren and a great granddaughter.

Funeral services will be held today at 2 p. m. at the Huntemann funeral home, 5732 Georgia ave. nw. Burial will be private.

Retired D. C. Wine Steward Is Dead at 74

Edward R. Jacobsen, 74, native Washingtonian and wine steward at the Mayflower Hotel for 15 years, before his retirement in 1944, died early yesterday at Suburban Hospital.

Death was attributed to the after effects of an injury to his hip suffered in a fall on August 10, while visiting his daughter, Mrs. Claire J. Pilcher, at her home on Lux le., Route 5, Rockville, Md.

Mr. Jacobsen was the son of Carl E. Jacobsen, a former member of the Danish Consulate in Baltimore, and Mrs. Frances Roberts Jacobsen of Baltimore. He was educated in District public schools.

Mr. Jacobsen was originally wine steward at the old Chamberlain Hotel, 15th and I sts. nw., in the 1890s. He worked in a similar capacity at the Willard Hotel for 35 years before going to the Mayflower.

He was a member of the Washington Elks Lodge.

Besides his daughter, Mr. Jacobsen is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mabel Kraft Jacobsen. He lived at 2827 15th st. nw.

How many waiters are there in this picture?

The answer is eight, if you include all the folks who are waiting to be served. With a little neighborly sharing on everybody's part, they could help make the service go around.

The same thing is true of telephone service. Today, despite the rapid progress being made on our service improvement and expansion program, some people are still waiting for telephones.

That's why we're making the widest possible use of party-line facilities. Sharing the lines means that more people can get service, sooner.

If you're on a party line, please remember the other fellow. That way, you'll be helping your neighbors and yourself to finer, faster telephone service.

Your party line is a partnership—please use it "sharingly"

Society Attends Colorful Fetes At Pakistan, Dominican Embassies

By Elizabeth Maguire

MORE than a thousand guests gathered in the formal garden of the Pakistan Embassy yesterday, and another group passed the cocktail hour sitting under the pear trees of the embassy of the Dominican Republic. At the Pakistan Embassy the occasion celebrated the first anniversary of the country's independence. The garden fete at the embassy of the Dominican Republic marked the anniversary of the presidential inauguration of Rafael L. Trujillo as well as restoration day, a day which goes back to 1865, when the Spanish left the island for the last time.

The Ambassador of Pakistan and Mrs. Ispahani received their guests in a brocaded drawing drawing room done in shades of gold, green, pale yellow and rose. On a soft green carpet were placed Oriental rugs, and flowers around the room were shell pink or white.

Lavish buffet tables were set up in the garden, on the terrace and in the dining room. Turkeys, lobsters, various aspics, salads, hors d'oeuvres, petit fours, tarts, cakes, nuts, ices were a few of the dishes in the delectable array.

Pakistan Beauties

The Indian Embassy has always had its noted beauties and now the Pakistan Embassy has introduced a few more. Mrs. Husain, wife of an embassy attache, was a charming hostess at the party, dressed in white silk tunic and skirt and silk shawl, a type of costume preferred to the sari by the ladies of Pakistan. Another embassy lady with black hair and china blue eyes was dressed in a tunic of raspberry taffeta.

Among the guests in the crowded garden were the Ambassador of India and Lady Rami Rau, the Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. Van Kleffens, Admiral William D. Leahy, the Polish Ambassador; Jozef Winiewicz; the Russian Ambassador, Alexander S. Panyushkin, and the Ambassador of Yugoslavia, Sava N. Kosanovic.

The Charge d'Affaires of Switzerland, Werner Fuchss, was there, said his wife was still at Newport visiting her mother.

In a group together were the Ambassador of Australia and Mrs. Norman Makin, the Australian High Commissioner to the Union of South Africa, Alfred Stirling, Miss Dorothy Stirling and Carlton Savage of the State Department.

From the Indian Embassy came the Minister and Mme. Nehru and the First Secretary and Mrs. Chopra. The British Minister, F. R. Hoyer Miller, attended, as well as the Irish Minister and Mme. Nunan. The Greek Ambassador, Vassili C. Dendramis, was there, talking with Raymond Muir, Assistant Chief of Protocol.

Still other guests included Mrs. Wilfred D. Whittemore, George Baker, Representative and Mrs. Everett Dirksen, the Counselor of Pakistan, M. O. A. Baig; Richard Sanger, who has just returned from California; Judge and Mrs. George D. Neilson; the Ambassador of El Salvador and Senor de Castro; the Minister of New Zealand and Lady Berendsen; Mr. and Mrs. J. Vesagur of the Indian Supply Mission, and the Charge d'Affaires of Iraq, Ahmed Izzet Mohammed.

The men of Pakistan are as individual in their costume as the ladies. Imdad Husain, cultural attache, wore a grey tunic over loose white trousers and gold embroidered slippers upturned at the toes. On his head he wore a cap of grey caracal fur. Other men varied their costumes with black caracal caps, black tunics and brown and white shoes.

Entertain in Garden

In the cool garden of the Dominican Embassy guests sat around small tables until well after sundown. The Ambassador and Senora de Thomen stood at the entrance to the terrace to receive their guests. They were assisted by the Minister Counselor and Senora Enriqueta de Cohn. The hostess wore a black print frock pinned with orchids at the shoulder, and Senora de Cohn wore a black lace ballerina gown and black satin ankle strap stoes.

A younger member of the family who seemed to be enjoying herself at the party was little Maria Consuelo, four-year-old daughter of the Ambassador. Senora de Arredondo, mother of Senora de Thomen, was also a guest.

In a far corner of the garden an attractive group included Mrs. Leo Brison Norris, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Borden of Baltimore, Alfred Lilienthal, Mme. Valdimir Rybar, Mrs. Robert Geoque, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Clark Woodward Mrs. Parker West, Mrs. William Pope Anderson 3d, and Miss Cathleen Parker of New York.

The Ambassador of Burma, U So Nyun, came over from the Pakistan party to the Dominican Embassy, as did the Australian Ambassador and Mrs. Makin and Mrs. Whittemore. Others in the gathering included the Ambassador of the Argentine, Jeronimo Remorino; the Ambassador of Nicaragua, Guillermo Sevilla-Sacasa; the Indian Ambassador and Lady Rami Rau, the Colombian Ambassador and Senora de d'Affaires of Spain, Germain Barraibar, the Colombian Counselor and Senora de Medina and the Secretary to the President and Mrs. Charles G. Ross.

Miss Townsend To Make Bow

Miss Elenore DeWitt Townsend will make her bow to society on November 27 at a tea at her home. The debutante is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John William Townsend. She attended National Cathedral School for Girls and Mount Vernon Seminary.

Last January a tea dance was given for Miss Townsend by her parents at the Washington Club. Miss Betty Harrell, one of that season's debutantes, and Miss Elizabeth Anne Kline, goddaughter of Mrs. Townsend, shared honors with her on this occasion.

At Atlantic City

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Pelzman are spending several weeks in Atlantic City.

Luncheon Is Given At Australian Embassy

THE Ambassador of Australia, Norman Makin, and the First Secretary of Australia, Ralph Harry, were co-hosts yesterday at an embassy luncheon. Their guests were the Ambassador of Burma, U So Nyun, the Ambassador of Colombia, Gonzalo Restrepo-Jaramillo, the Ambassador of the Dominican Republic, Luis Francisco Thomen, the Ambassador of Venezuela, Gonzalo Carnevali, the Ambassador of Pakistan, M. A. H. Ispahani, the Ambassador of El Salvador, Hector David Castro, the Charge d'Affaires of Iraq, Ali Jawdat, and the Charge d'Affaires of Afghanistan, Abdol Hosayn Aziz.

Mountain Holiday

The First Secretary of the Uruguay Embassy and Senora de Yriart have taken a cottage at Rogers Rock, Lake George, N. Y., where they will be until the first part of September.

Daughter Is Guest Of Mrs. Macondray

Mrs. Atherton Macondray has with her for a visit her daughter, Mrs. Thomas Nelson Coppedge, and her six-week-old son, Thomas Nelson Coppedge 3d. Lieutenant Coppedge, who has just received his wings at Jacksonville Fla., was here for a week before leaving yesterday to report to Norfolk for a new assignment.

Mrs. Coppedge will be with her mother until her husband is assigned to new duty.

Syrians Have Anniversary

Today is the anniversary of the restoration of constitutional life in Syria. A freely elected Syrian Parliament held its first session on August 17, 1943. The day also coincides with the election for the first time of President Chucri Kouatly, who is now serving his second five-year term.

Fortuitously Timed Comments

Kerensky Gives His Ideas On Scotching Aggression In' Holes in Iron Curtain'

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

FORTUITOUSLY timed, Alexander Kerensky's article, "Holes in the Iron Curtain," appears in a current issue of the American Magazine. First of the politically important refugees from communism, Kerensky has been in and out of this country many times since his exile. Squarely built, his hair cut en brosse, the man who headed Russia's government for eight months talks with slow distinction in a thick foreign accent, squinting his near-sighted eyes in conversational emphasis. An intellectual dowered with humor, like so many unbolshevised Russians, Kerensky's a cosy companion.

On his initial New York trip he visited the late Republican Congressman Kenneth Simpson and his witty red-haired wife. (Helen Simpson is the one who achieved a title of immortality via that much bruited inversion about Dewey, "To know him is to dislike him.") Kerensky made such an ideal house guest that he stayed on with the Simpsons until his marriage to an attractive red-head whom he met in London.

Two years ago, on a visit to her home, Mme. Kerensky died. Since Kerensky's small Connecticut house has been rented for some time to Episcopal priests, he has moved to New York. During the years Kerensky has supported himself by writing, giving lectures, doing professional chores such as last winter's stint at the University of Kansas, giving a course on Russian history and politics. A great deal of his time is spent working with Russian DPs, the 300,000 plus, of whom all but a few thousands in actual camps, are hiding out in Europe.

For those too young to remember, Kerensky's brief, meteoric career climaxed in 1917. The then 30-year-old lawyer was socialist leader in the Duma (Parliament), became Minister of Justice, then gathering power, spearheaded a revolution which overthrew the Czarist regime. He was ousted by the Communists eight months later on November 7, a date now commemorated throughout the Red world with fuss, streams of vodka, figurative dancing in the streets, as October Revolution Day.

Kerensky's Thesis

THE MAIN thesis of Kerensky's article is that if we drove a wedge between the Communist government and the Russian people we would scotch Russian aggression.

But Kerensky's analysis of this week's "mystery of the kidnaped school teachers" is more interesting . . . He believes the teachers' defection a very strong blow both psychologically and spiritually to Soviet propaganda; while over here it will remove the last vestige of naive public opinion which insists much is rosy in Russia, make even the most skeptical finally understand the realities in Russia today.

In Russia, he says, a silent but very strong opinion exists which is only too well aware that the Soviet government lies continually. After all Stalin didn't think up anything new. Lenin said "We must lie. We must calumny for the profit of Bolshevism."

So Molotov's protest to Ambassador Smith demanding United States investigation and punishment of those involved in the "kidnaping" is evaluated in Russia for its worth—the repetition of lies useful to the Communist cause.

Kerensky refused to comment on whether the Soviet Consul General, the Soviet Ambassador should be sent back to Russia. But he mentioned what happened to Lord Grey during the First World War. Lord Grey, here on a special diplomatic assignment during the First World War, one day lunched with Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Woodrow Wilson's most bitter opponent. Lord Grey uttered the faintest whisper of criticism against the Administration. It was relayed to the President who wrote Britain's Prime Minister. Not much later Lord Grey left Washington.

Kerensky, incidentally, has never published his book of memoirs. He worked on it some years, the war came along which delayed publication and now he's lost interest. It's a pity for he lived through a turbulent period about which very little of value has been recorded.

Rarebit Uses Leftovers

IF YOU want to vary that meat-saving dish, rarebit (or rabbit), try the corn and tomato variety. It's a good way to use up left-over cooked vegetables, too. You can cut the kernels from cold corn on the cob.

CORN AND TOMATO RAREBIT

1 green pepper minced ½ small onion, minced
2 tablespoons butter of margarine
2/3 cup cooked (or canned) corn kernels
½ pound American cheese, grated ½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar 2/3 cup stewed or canned tomatoes
2 eggs, slightly beaten Toast or crackers

Cook pepper and onion in butter until softened. Add corn and simmer until heated. Add cheese, salt, sugar and tomatoes. Stir until cheese is melted. Add eggs and cook over low flame two or three minutes. Serve on toast or crackers.

Ask Anne: About Making Ceramics at Home

Can you tell me the magazine which recently published an article on ceramics, describing how to make various articles at home? I would also like to know where to purchase the clay in Washington. R. S.

One fairly recent article on this subject was entitled, "Be Your Own Potter," and appeared in the Family Circle for June, 1947. The Washington Public Library also has a number of books on this subject which should be helpful. One is "Creative Ceramics," by Katherine M. Lester, and another "Potter's Primer," by Jane Snead. These tell how to make ceramic jewelry and other articles. "Pottery Made Easy," by John W. Dougherty; "Pottery Making," by York Honore, and "Potter's Craft," by Charles F. Binns, tell how to make vases, bowls and other household ceramic articles.

As to where to buy the clay, if you will look in the yellow section of the telephone book you will find a number of shops listed under pottery. Some of these not only give lessons in ceramics but sell the materials as well.

I have an old marriage certificate of my parents which is 58 years old. It is broken in two, for it has been rolled, but is very pretty. Can you tell me where I can get this put together and framed? H. S. P.

One local firm that does work of this type can be reached by telephoning Dupont 2323, and another at Hobart 3400. Both concerns will want to examine the certificate before saying positively how good a mending job can be done on it.

Can you tell me of an agency or organization which accepts clothing to be sent to needy European children? I have a number of pairs of children's shoes, overshoes and outgrown clothes. H. M.

One organization that is quite active in clothes collection for overseas relief is Church World Service. This group maintains clothing depots at various Protestant churches in Washington. To find out which one is nearest you, telephone National 4604.

Can you tell me if a pair of white suede shoes could be dyed black successfully? Is there any good method to do the dyeing at home? J. S. D.

Many shops that specialize in dyeing shoes do not recommend this. The dressing used on white suede complicates the dye job and the dark dye brings out all the imperfections in the leather. Some shops will do it, but at the owner's risk. At any rate, it would be better to have the job done by a professional rather than to try it yourself.

Can you give me information as to where I could find persons who could teach me the stitch to make nets such as crab net? A. J. M.

I do not know where you could find a teacher in the art of net-making. However, you can obtain a booklet from the Fish and Wildlife Service, United States Department of the Interior, Washington, D. C., which explains in detail and with illustrations how to make the mesh stitch used for crab nets. Write to the publications section of the Service and ask for Fishery Leaflet 125, "How to Make and Mend Fish Nets."

Notes for the Housekeeper

Paint the inside of the kitchen cupboard white and the dishes will look attractive against the background.

Never scrape a saucepan with a knife; it is very apt to make the pan burn quickly next time it is used, not to mention ruining the surface of the pan.

Clothes will last longer and remain a far better color if they are always laundered before becoming very badly soiled. This is particularly true of colored materials.

Scouring Help

When using scouring powder either on the dishcloth or on a dampened steel sponge, first rub soap on the cloth or steel and then apply cleanser. Now rub vigorously on pots and pans and see how readily they will polish.

Cleaner Toothbrushes

Toothbrushes should be dipped into boiling water to disinfect them. Every so often pour peroxide of hydrogen over the bristles and then rinse well with hot water. It will cleanse and whiten the bristles at the same time.

Miss Patricia Nanette McDaniel and Leon Delfs Zimmerman were married August 14 at Church of the Holy City in Washington. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. McDaniel of Silver Spring, Md., and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Zimmerman of Oberlin, Ohio.

The bride's dress was of white satin with a bodice fashioned of lace. Her veil of illusion was edged in lace that was used on her grandmother's wedding gown. She carried a purple throated orchid on her white Bible.

Miss Sarah Cameron, the bride's cousin, of Columbus, Ohio, was maid of honor and Mrs. W. H. McDaniel of Washington, Mrs. Leslie Agnello of Montclair, N. J., and Mrs. John L. Zimmerman of Ypsilanti, Mich., were bridesmaids. Christine Boyer was flower girl. John L. Zimmerman served his brother as best man and the ushers were W. H. McDaniel, Harlan MacDavis and Herbert French.

A reception was held after the wedding after which the couple left for a honeymoon in northern Pennsylvania. They will reside in Ames, Iowa.

Hofman—Haverty

Miss Gloria Anne Haverty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis A. Haverty of Washington, became the bride of Leo Charles Hofman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo B. Hofman of Lapeer, Mich., in St. Anthony's Church August 14, the Rev. John L. Bailey officiating.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of candlelight satin. Her fingertip veil of illusion was held by a coronet of seed pearls and she carried white orchids with her prayer book.

Mrs. Jean Murray was the matron of honor and Miss Eliza Spivey the maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Josephine Caffarelli and Miss Ann Roberts. Miss Donna Sanders was the flower girl and Michael Gary Lyons was ring bearer.

Charles Hartman, jr., served as best man and the ushers were John Owens, Ralph Edwards and Carl Hurlebous.

Following the reception the couple left for a wedding trip to Canada. On their return they will reside at Queens Chapel Manor in Maryland.

The bridegroom attended Flint Junior College, the University of Detroit and received his bachelor's degree from American University. A member of Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity, he received his master's degree from the University of Maryland.

Morton—Robinson

Miss Marion Blanche Robinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard H. Holmes of Hyattsville, Md., and James Howard Morton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard James Morton of Chevy Chase, Md., were married August 7. The Rev. Harold R. McClay officiated at the ceremony at Memorial Methodist Church in Hyattsville.

Mr. Holmes gave his stepdaughter in marriage. She wore white imported dotted Swiss and carried white roses and lilies of the valley with an orchid.

Miss Vera Pettie was maid of honor and Misses Jean Pons, Ruth Hutchinson, Aline Johnson and LaFaye Adams were attendants. Robert Bailey was best man and the ushers were Charles Wilson, Phil Norris, Harrison Stevens and Herbert Knighton.

After a reception at the bride's home, the couple left for Rangeley Lakes, Me. They will reside at Mount Rainier, Md.

Both the bride and bridegroom attended University of Maryland.

Kerby—Chiaro

In the Church of the Redeemer August 14, Miss Amelia Chiaro, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Chiaro, became the bride of Joseph Melvin Kerby, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Kerby. The Rev. Olindo Marseglia officiated.

Given in marriage by her brother, Domenick Chiaro, the bride wore a gown of white satin with a scalloped French lace neckline. Her finger-tip veil of illusion was held by a seed pearl tiara and she carried a bouquet of white roses.

Miss M. V. Hedrick was the maid of honor and William A. Mohan served as best man.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held. The couple will reside in Washington.

At Mayflower Lounge

Seen lunching together in the Mayflower lounge yesterday were Mme. Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, and Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell. The two have just returned from a visit to China, where Mrs. Cowell was the guest of the Ambassadress.

Miss Ayres Marries in Iowa

Miss Sarah Ruth Ayres, daughter of Prof. and Mrs. Quincy Claude Ayres of Ames, Iowa, became the bride of Louis Walls Shroyer 3d, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis W. Shroyer of Baltimore, Md., August 7. The Rev. LeRoy S. Burroughs officiated at the double-ring ceremony at St. John's-by-the-Campus in Ames.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore white marquisette trimmed in ruffles. Her veil fell from a Mary Queen of Scots cap trimmed with orange blossoms and she carried a white prayer book with a white orchid and stephanotis attached.

Miss Martha Creekmore of Jackson, Miss., was maid of honor, and Mrs. Andrew Johnston of Baltimore, sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor. The bridesmaids were Misses Jane Graff and Frances Friley of Ames, Miss Janice Herron of Glendora, Miss., Miss Catherine Hardwick of Rydal, Pa. Andrew Johnston of Baltimore was best man and the ushers were William Leedy and Herbert Bates of Jefferson City, Mo., Fred Vinson, jr., of Washington and Wilbur Donaldson of Ames.

Following a reception the couple left for a wedding trip to Sun Valley.

Mrs. Shroyer was graduated from Helen Bush School in Seattle and attended Sweet Briar College in Virginia. Mr. Shroyer, a graduate of Washington and Lee University, served during the war as an officer in Army Air Forces.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman's Marriage Is Heavenly, Her Husband An Angel, But Even So Her Sleep Is Broken By Repetitive Dreams of Menacing Hardships

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My earliest recollections have to do with being told how small I was as a baby; how homely, how like my father's family; how awkward I was as a growing child; how this-and-that was wrong with me.

However, I am completely extrovert by native temperament, and outwardly at least I didn't register ill-effects from this negative coaching. I like myself a lot, and in my teens I eloped with a man mostly because he told me I was pretty and desirable. We got married, of course, and had one child, a daughter who is now grown and married.

My husband developed tuberculosis at the age of 35. This was followed by other ailments, and I became the family breadwinner, during the depression years of the 1930s. I did more and more work to keep my job and meet expenses, and finally my husband's death brought this chapter of drudgery to a close.

Is There Cure For Nightmares?

I WASN'T widowed very long when I married a wonderful man. Truly he is one in a million and our home life is heaven. We own our home, we never quarrel, I have help in the house, a new car, furs, jewels, etc., but despite this idyllic existence I dream almost nightly that I am still coping with the final phase of my first marriage.

In these dreams it seems I'm still at work in the place of employment I left more than 10 years ago . . . that I've never left . . . that I am lost in the subway . . . that elevators won't wait for me . . . that I'm afraid I'll be late . . . that I must hurry, I might lose my job . . . that my boss is displeased, etc., etc.

In these dreams there is no inkling of my second marriage, and it seems my child isn't married either. I waken exhausted, drenched in perspiration, and at least one night a week is entirely sleepless as a result. Is there any cure for this? E. S.

Her Dreams Hinge On Self Contempt

DEAR E. S.: In general, dreams are made up of a motley procession of fragments of thought and impulses of feeling that the conscious mind won't tolerate when it is awake and sitting in judgment on its contents, with the aim (mostly involuntary) of keeping said contents as tame, reassuring and conventional as possible.

Moreover, repetitive dreams of nightmarish quality usually derive from (and seek to "blow off") unconscious anxieties obscurely pitted in the dreamer's emotional make-up; and it seems clear that your bad dreams insistently stress the damage done to your self regard, in early years, by the negative disparaging tirades that were your elders' conversational stock-in-trade.

These dreams give a picture of a personality unconsciously disposed to expect frustration, hardship, unrewarding struggle, failure and rejection as her inevitable portion in the field of human relations and social endeavors, an anxiety trend you could hardly escape, in view of your earliest recollections of your family's trampling on your ego.

Feels Unworthy Of Good Fortune

THE FINAL phase of your first marriage brought harrowing literal trials that dovetailed perfectly with your ingrained pessimist bias, hence that chapter of experience "rang true" to your unconscious mind, which hasn't yet rallied from the shock of fears confirmed, so to speak, and continues to brood on it fixedly, thus giving rise to disturbing dreams.

At deep unconscious levels of feeling, you aren't conditioned to believe in the reality, or indeed the possibility, of permanent good fortune for yourself, despite 10 consecutive years' idyllic existence that is still in force today, which means that fundamentally you damn yourself, due to accepting your family's long-ago views as gospel, even while telling yourself you don't.

The cure for this handicapping attitude is to realize that your mature-age performance and the blessings it has attracted give the measure of your real worth in the scale of human values. Peace of mind is based on right love of self; and a session or two with a penetrating psychologist might give you a lift in that direction. M. H.

Baby Will Put Himself On Schedule

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It is quite possible that the baby will put himself on a three-meal schedule before the parent considers him to be ready for it. The moment a child shows a consistent disinterest in the 2 o'clock feeding it is obvious that he is moving toward that schedule. This may, and often does, happen as early as the fifth month with some children, and as late as the ninth with others.

It is pretty impossible to manage this type of schedule if the baby is waking as early as 5 in the morning. The baby who is ready for three meals will tend to sleep until 6:30 or 7, and then the three meals may be served agreeably to him at 7:30 a. m., 11:30 a. m. and 5:30 p. m., or thereabouts.

Snack Is Welcome

The stretch between 11:30 and 5:30 is so long that, though a child may be uninterested in a regular meal, he will enjoy half a glass of milk or even a quarter of a glass and perhaps a couple of cookies or crackers. This comes naturally right after the long noon nap and is usually a welcome snack. This is a good time to make use of a cup. The baby should be allowed to take it or leave it at will.

There should be no worry that the baby will lose important nourishment on so few meals. The appetite is better when the interval between feedings is long, and the child consumes more at each meal.

When the child is on three meals it means that all the food designed for those meals should be given at one time. Too often the mother enumerates the three meals and then announces that she gives the milk between meals. Milk is a food. It demands digestion and the baby is not being given the necessary long interval between meals if he has solid food at one time and milk at another.

Child Decides on Food

The amount of solids should be balanced so the baby can take all that he needs and still have enough appetite left to drink his formula or plain. Ordinarily children do this themselves, shaking their heads, turning away or otherwise making it plain that they have had enough of any particular food.

If they drink too much and won't eat, then solid food had best be served first. If they eat too much and won't drink, then some portion of the milk may well be given between mouthfuls of food. Each mother learns to manage this in the way that is most satisfactory to her own small eater.

Dusky Pink Mousse Is Pretty Salad For Bridge Party

Pretty as a picture is this congealed and excellently flavored salad. It's just the thing for after-bridge refreshments or for a buffet supper.

DUSKY PINK MOUSSE

6 cloves
Rind of half lemon
¼ teaspoon onion juice
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon dry mustard
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
1 package lemon-flavored gelatin
1 cup cottage cheese.
1-3 cup mayonnaise
1 cup sour cream, whipped

Combine soup, cloves and lemon rind. Bring slowly to boiling point. Remove from fire and add onion juice, salt, pepper, mustard, Worcestershire sauce and gelatin. Stir until gelatin is dissolved. Cool, but before it sets, remove lemon peel and cloves and beat in cheese which has been pressed through a sieve. Add mayonnaise and blend thoroughly. Fold in the whipped cream. Pour into large ring or small individual molds. Allow to ripen in refrigerator 24 hours before serving on bed of lettuce. This recipe makes six portions.

Beer Flavors Hot Meat Balls

If you like a little touch of beer in your cooking, maybe you'll want to try this recipe for hot, savory meat balls and gravy:

BEEF 'N BEER

1 cup beer
¾ cup water
2 slices bread, cubed
1 pound ground round steak
½ cup chopped onions
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon poultry seasoning
2 tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons drippings
1 tablespoon chow-chow pickle

Combine beer and water. Let bread stand in one half cup of mixture, then beat until smooth. Add meat, onions, salt, pepper, and poultry seasoning. Blend well and chill.

Shape into balls 1 inch in diameter; dredge in flour. Brown on all sides in hot drippings. Place on hot platter. Add remaining flour and blend well. Gradually add remaining beer-water mixture and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Add chow-chow and meat balls, and season to taste. Cook until meat balls are heated through. This recipe makes six to eight portions.

Quicker Roasting

If delayed in getting home the night you had planned a roast, put the roast in the pan and place under the broiler in a quick oven while the top oven is heating. Let the roast sear well on all sides. By the time it is nicely browned the oven will be hot enough to continue the roasting quickly and save you about 20 to 25 minutes in the cooking.

3 Armed Men Rob Cigar Store and Fell Proprietor

David Dismon's cigar store, 2129 P st. nw., was robbed of about $25 last night by three armed men, one of whom rapped Dismon, the proprietor, on the head with a pistol butt before departing.

Not seriously injured, Dismon told reporters later that he heard a gunshot in the alley, but "didn't go out to see what it was all about."

Police broadcast a lookout for the trio, describing them as Negroes, all about 6 feet tall and of heavy build. One man had a light skin. A second man who used a pistol, police said, wore dark glasses and a dark suit and hat.

MARK TRAIL

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

A Fellow Named Snead Has the Same Trouble

In winning the Women's National Open Golf Tournament on Sunday, Babe Didrikson Zaharias lost a $1000 bonus when her final putt failed to drop for a 299.

"That's the way it's been all day," wailed the Babe. "I just couldn't make a putt."

Although you use a touch quite deft
It's such a tricky sport
They roll off to the right or left
Or stop an inch too short

I never play for thousands, but
I have a better time.
The Babe blows fortunes on a putt
While I pay off a dime.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill

A couple of questions:

1. What do you think of all the rain we've had this summer?

2. Are the appointments of Cincinnati's new hotel superior to the Statler here?

R. H. Wesley,
2117 N. Glebe rd.,
Arlington, Va.

Dear Mr. Wesley:

1. Every time I beef about the weather, it gets worse. No comment.

2. I'll take the Statler, any day. This modernistic stuff can be carried too far. Bill.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

A. S. Trask of 4306 Alton pl. nw. clips this dilly from a Minneapolis paper:

"There's Solveig, one of the 10 youngsters in the 15 to 16-year group, who last night hammered away on 10 pianos in a concert in Northrup Auditorium."

One finger for each piano?

ADD SIGNS

Claire Smith of Takoma Park, Md., tells me she saw a Mayflower moving van sporting two signs on its back end.

One, under an arrow pointing to the left, read: "Passing Side." The other, under an arrow pointing to the right, said: "Suicide."

SUGGESTION

W. M. O'C. has a simple suggestion for speeding up rush-hour traffic.

"If you're in a cab," he says, "have the correct change ready for the driver. Or, at the very least, have your money ready for him.

"If you order the cab to stop on a busy street, and then start digging through your pockets or purse for the fare, you're holding up all the cars in the lane behind you.

"Isn't it just as simple to start digging for the moola before you reach your destination?"

AIN'T IT THE TRUTH?

David B. Harrison of 900 19th st. nw. observes that "most political speeches have a happy ending. Everybody is glad when they're over."

GIVE-AWAY

"Large, affectionate male dog, about 5 months old; also doghouse." (Axminster 6582.)

PERSONAL NOTES

Margaret Cooley, 1019 Woodside pkwy., Silver Spring, Md.: We caught that one in the later editions. Thanks.

Mrs. L. Costrell, 9905 Tenbrook dr., Silver Spring, Md.: If you'll watch the Give-Aways for a few days I'm sure you'll find just the pup you want for your boys.

Jack Daiker, 140 Tennessee ave. ne.: The new "Stop" signs are every bit as legal as the old ones. I know a fellow who established the point—the hard way.

NO WONDER HE WANTS TO REMAIN ANONYMOUS

A male reader who wishes to remain anonymous writes:

"Please don't refer to them as 'lady drivers'. Call them 'women drivers'. When they drive, they're not ladies."

THE OLD "BAWL" GAME

President Truman is going out to the ball game tonight, to honor Clark Griffith and root for the home team.

Listen to Bill Gold each noon, Monday through Saturday, over WINX (1340) and WINX-FM (98.3).

NEW YORK—Barney Ross is trying to catch up with the imposter who has been using his name in phoning New Yorkers to solicit money ostensibly for the Damon Runyon Memorial Fund For Cancer Research. We of the Runyon Fund have no employees, and never, from the very first day, have we ever solicited any personal contributions . . . Station WPIX telecasts a Battle-Page program, giving equal time to representatives of the four major parties. Wallace's Progressive Party has complained to the station because the Socialist Party is represented too frequently by candidate Norman Thomas himself.

Tommy Lyman, the veteran nightclub minstrel now employed at Leslie House, has worked in cafes throughout the world. Paris remains one of his favorite cities, and this week he sat with a man who had just returned from France. He questioned him about the restaurants and cafes of Paris, and in particular about de la Tour d'Argent, the best restaurant in Paris. "I went there once, and I found the prices on the menue so high that I complained to the manager," he reported. "The manager replied by showing me the New York menus of Chambord Le Pavillon and the Stork Club, and saying: 'And are these prices low?'"

The investigation of the murder of George Polk, CBS's correspondent in Greece, won't be permitted to lag. CBS's commentators soon will release a series of broadsides about it . . . Beatrice Pearson, who makes her film debut opposite John Garfield in "The Numbers Racket," will be his leading lady when he returns to the Broadway theater in the fall . . . Charles Yale Harrison, author of "Generals Die In Bed," devoted four years to writing his newest book, "Nobody's Fool," which will be published next month . . . Joseph Szigeti, the violinist, was naturalized last week.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Navy Clings to Old 'Justice'

By Drew Pearson

Speaker Joe Martin and Senator Alben Barkley are on the opposite sides of the political fence, but, meeting by accident at a social function the other day, Speaker Martin went up to Barkley and said:

Barkley

"Senator, I am sorry I have not had the opportunity to congratulate you on the high honor that your party has seen fit to bestow upon you."

"Well, you know it reminds me of the story of the man who had two sons," replied Senator Barkley. "One of them became a sailor and went to sea, the other became Vice President, and he hasn't heard from either one of them since."

Obsolete Court-Martial

Effective February 1, the Army will revamp its system of military justice—thanks to a last-minute amendment that Congress tacked onto the Draft Act. But the medieval naval code, which metes out separate justice for the gold braid and the bellbottoms, still remains unchanged.

Actually, Navy justice hasn't altered basically since the rough-and-tumble days of John Paul Jones. Even among the gold braid, Annapolis-graduated officers get preferred treatment before naval courts.

For example, a junior officer who came up from the ranks was forced to take the rap recently at Washington's Naval Research Laboratory, while his commanding officers got off with a figurative slap-on-the-wrist.

Lieut. (j. g.) Kenneth L. Curtis was charged and convicted of stealing a Navy generator. Despite his conviction, the amazing fact is that the generator was found bolted to the floor of the summer cottage of his senior officer, Comdr. Louis R. Hird, at Gray Eagle Lake, Minn. Curtis hadn't even signed the papers authorizing the shipment.

Commander Hird, an Annapolis man, got off with a light reprimand for "unauthorized use of Navy property." He had several charges against him, but all were dismissed, and after the trial, he shook hands all around and joked with the officers who had tried the case. Lieutenant Curtis, on the other hand, was convicted of stealing the generator.

Capt. Hilford Owen, the Research Laboratory's commanding officer, another Annapolis grad, also was accused of "borrowing" Navy equipment. But, apparently wanting to get out of the Navy, he pleaded "insanity." A Navy doctor, Comdr. John Edward Nardini of Bethesda Naval Hospital, testified that Captain Owen was "flustered" and suffered from "mild depression." His "continuity of ideas" also wasn't what it should be. His examination of Captain Owen had lasted only 1 hour and 30 minutes.

The naval court, however, turned Captain Owen's case back to the convening authority because it found "reasonable doubt" of the defendant's sanity. If normal procedure is followed, the captain will get his discharge—but probably no punishment.

Note—Both Captain Owen and Commander Hird were able to buy new Buicks at dealer's price through Waldo Andrews, a Detroit promoter who was seeking contracts from the Naval Research Laboratory for manufacturing precision tools. Yet Lieutenant Curtis, who didn't get a Buick, was the only one convicted by the naval court-martial. Curtis is not an Annapolis man.

GOP Young Blood

Two bigshot gamblers, Dan Sullivan and Lincoln Fitzgerald, were led into a courtroom at Mount Clemens, Mich., last week to stand trial. They had fled from Michigan nearly four years before; and their return marked a triumph for go-getting young Republican Ed Jacob, prosecutor of Macomb County.

It also high lighted a row inside Michigan Republican circles that flared briefly at the Philadelphia convention, and which probably will be followed up by the Dewey Administration—if there is one.

At Philadelphia, the strong Vandenberg contingent of the Michigan delegation put the skids under pro-Dewey Mrs. Dudley Hay as secretary of the Republican National Committee. Only Michigander who stood up for Mrs. Hay was young Ed Jacob. For Mrs. Hay had helped him in his crime cleanup of Macomb County which stands cheek-and-jowl alongside Detroit and gets a backwash of Detroit racketeers and gamblers.

From Macomb County, gamblers Danny Sullivan and Lincoln Fitzgerald fled to Reno, Nev., in 1945. There Ed Jacob pursued them, and with the help of Nevada's Gov. Vail Pittman and Attorney General Allen Bible last week finally brought them back to Michigan.

Powerful GOP forces in Michigan, allegedly backed by Frank McKay, the GOP race track bigshot, are now out to defeat Jacob. Whether he wins or not, however, the Dewey boys are watching Jacob. They haven't forgotten his help at Philadelphia, and are looking round for young GOP blood anyway.

Dress Rehearsal for War

Eight miles out of Frankfort, Germany, at the Rhine-Main Airport, is a place the GIs call "Boom Town." It is called that because a new town has sprung up overnight, with the carpenters' hammers still making as much noise as the airplane motors—all because of the Berlin airlift.

One thing about this airlift that most people don't realize is that it's an Air Force rehearsal for future possible ventualities. And the top air people are quite candid about this fact.

Furtheromre, if the diplomats succeed in raising the Berlin blockade, the Air Force does not intend to abandon its installations. Boom Town will stay right on—just in case the Russians tighten up their economic grip on Berlin once again.

Important friend

I like the influential friend . . . Who does so much for me . . . And who is there to help in time . . . Of real necessity . . . Who has the magic power and . . . The strength to turn the tide . . . When I am faced with promises . . . Of charity or pride . . . But even more important is . . . The influential friend . . . Who looks beyond the clouds and sees . . . A rainbow at the end . . . Who lifts me up when I am down . . . And tries to urge me on . . . Whenever I am dubious . . . About another dawn . . . Who uses every influence . . . To get my lips to smile . . . And makes me feel the better all . . . My life is worth the while.
